Mayor Challenges Reid Opponents

Put Up Money For Land

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock today challenged surrounding area opponents of the Reid development to put their money down to help the city buy the Inner Harbor waterfront property.

Haddock said in an interview he would like to see a referendum in each outlying municipality voting funds for preservation of the city's waterfront.

Calling a rising tide of concern over the fate of the Reid proposal a "big hoop-di-do," Haddock said in one meeting held last winter on the waterfront controversy, he counted only six Victorians out of 150 people present.

REFERENDUM?

"I would like to see a referendum" in surrounding municipalities, he said. "If they are willing to do that, I'm prepared to put it up to our council."

Last December Victoria ratepayers were asked on election ballots to say if they were prepared to buy the Reid property and some adjacent land, for an estimated price of $2 million.

The proposal was turned down by 58 per cent of the voters. A two-thirds majority was required for approval.

Meanwhile, at least two aldermen have said they hope to see a strong turn-out of citizens at city council meetings to give council an indication of public feeling.

Ald. Peter Pollen and Tom Christie have said if enough people oppose the Reid development, they are prepared to vote against final approval.

The two aldermen voted in favor of the modified version of the Reid complex. Pollen at the time said he would do so if council would agree to prohibit any further highrise construction on the waterfront.

Subsidy Debate Resumes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A mildly-critical Opposition today resumed debate on the government subsidy program to help Canadian exporters against the new U.S. import surtax.

The bill would allocate $80 million for subsidies to Canadian export industries harmed by the 10-per-cent U.S. surtax and $300,000 for a seven-man board to administer the program. Both sums would cover the program for the remainder of the fiscal year ending next March 31.

Manufacturing or processing plants which have exported at least one-fifth of their production to U.S. markets would qualify for subsidies if the U.S. surtax were jeopardizing production and employment.

Eligible plants could receive up to two-thirds of the surtax that would be applicable on their exports to the United States.

WOULD OFFSET LOSSES

That would largely offset the impact of the import surcharge announced Aug. 15 by President Nixon as part of a series of measures designed to reduce U.S. reliance on imports and shore up the domestic economy.

As such, it constitutes a defensive response to U.S. trade restrictions. Government ministers tried in vain earlier to win exemption for Canada from the import surtaxes.

Other, unspecified measures might follow, government ministers told the Commons.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson said Canada may be forced to reconsider its close industrial and trade relations with the United States. In the face of opposition heckling, he declined to elaborate.

TROOPS STONED IN LONDONDERRY

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Crowds stoned British troops here today in fierce rioting after the funeral of a 14-year-old Roman Catholic girl killed in a cross-fire.

Throughout Northern Ireland, troops braced for a new terrorist offensive as the outlawed Roman Catholic-based Irish Republican Army issued an ultimatum that internment of suspected terrorists be stopped and the Protestant-dominated Ulster Parliament be dissolved.

In Londonderry, the Roman Catholic crowds in the Bogside quarter had been angered by charges that the girl, Annette McGavigan, was shot by British marksmen as they battled terrorist gunmen.

Huge Forest Blaze Nears Hay River

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) — A rapidly-expanding forest fire still was out of control today about 8½ miles from this northern centre despite low winds and cool temperatures overnight.

Hay River is the second community in two weeks to be threatened by fires which have plagued the Northwest Territories this summer.

Winds of 20 miles an hour had been forecast for today but forestry officials said new estimates indicated they would only reach 10 to 15.

The winds, however, still were blowing in the general direction of this town of 3,500 persons, a principal supply and transportation route into the Canadian Arctic.

Youth's Drive to School Ends in Fatal Smash-Up

A 16-year-old high school student was killed on his way to school this morning when his small imported car was flattened in a head-on collision with a loaded gravel truck on the Pat Bay Highway.

David Richard Hajnal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Danny P. Hajnal, John Road, Sidney, was alone in his father's Datsun when it went out of control on a long turn eight miles from Victoria. The car slammed broadside into a loaded 25-ton tandem truck carrying gravel for highway construction.

Driver of the truck, which was headed north, was John Humphries, 24, of 4132 Wilkinson Rd. He was not injured.

SLICK ROAD

The accident occurred in drizzling rain on slick pavement. The small car was crushed under the heavy truck, and wreckage was strewn 100 feet along the east side of the highway.

The victim's father said David was on his way to the first full day of school in Grade 12 at Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School when the accident occurred at 8:20 a.m.

David had two sisters, Dona, 18, and Benita, 9, and a brother, Andra, 10.

The boy's father said he had discussed at breakfast whether he or his son should drive the small car to the city for repair to the starter.

Hajnal said David was keenly interested in sports, particularly soccer and riding.

Two pairs of soccer shoes were among the wreckage scattered along the side of the highway.

NEWS BRIEFS

Cahill Refused

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Irish Republican Army leader Joseph Cahill was ordered today excluded from the United States and sent back to Ireland. Cahill's lawyer said he would not lodge an appeal.

Deficit Forecast

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Treasury Secretary John Conally forecast today a United States budget deficit of between $27 billion and $28 billion in the financial year ending next June 30.

More Violence

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Renewed violence was reported at strikebound Texpack Ltd. today and a company official warned that the manufacturer of hospital supplies might close its plant. Picketing members of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Workers Union stoned three buses bringing non-union workers from Hamilton.

Treaty Ratified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ratified today a treaty to establish severe penalties for hijacking of airplanes.

U.S., Soviet Navies Confer in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States and Soviet navy personnel will meet in Moscow Oct. 12 to seek ways of avoiding collisions and other sea accidents between the military vessels of the two countries, the state department announced today.

Press officer Charles Bray said it is the first time since the Second World War that the two superpowers have undertaken talks to reduce friction resulting from the proximity of their military forces abroad.

"Over the years we have registered more than 100 reported incidents at sea and know that other reported dangerous situations have arisen," the spokesman said.

The two delegations also will include in their talks airplane overflights, sometimes referred to as "buzzing," in working toward safer operational standards and procedures, he said.

Heading the U.S. delegation will be John W. Warner, undersecretary of the navy. Leading the Soviet delegation will be Vladimir A. Kasatonov, first deputy commander in chief of Soviet naval forces.

PROPOSED BY U.S.

The state department spokesman said the United States first proposed the talks in April, 1968.

He declined to give any specifics on what the U.S. delegation would propose, but said the United States will not agree to anything which would change the international "rules of the road" at sea, nor would it do anything to restrict freedom of the high seas for U.S. naval forces.

Fishing boat incidents are not an item for the discussions, he added.

Warner's mission to Moscow is believed the first in which a high-ranking U.S. defence department official has travelled to the Soviet Union for significant discussion with Soviet authorities.

Cold Water Tossed On Welfare Job Plan

Industry and labor leaders were pessimistic today about Premier Bennett's plan to find jobs for those on welfare.

The premier Tuesday announced the provincial government would pay half salary of welfare recipients who find jobs starting Nov. 1.

F. G. Peskett, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said subsidies are not sufficient incentives for industry to create new jobs.

"Jobs are created if the demand in the market place requires increased production. You can't make a job that way if it isn't required in the first place."

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said labor will expect far more than the plan offers.

Ryan called on the government to use its fiscal and tax powers as well as government surpluses to "stimulate the economy for real growth."

ADMINISTER

"It is myopic to focus simply on this problem," Ryan said. "There are far greater problems than merely people on welfare."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will head a cabinet committee of four to administer the plan, Campbell said Tuesday as many as 10,000 persons on welfare might be eligible.

Other committee members are Labor Minister James Chabot, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings, Education Minister Donald Brothers and minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy.

TRAINING PLAN

Premier Bennett said the committee has responsibilities "over and above" the job finding programs in Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's department.

Gaglardi has been trying an on-the-job training program for welfare recipients. He said

LIONS RELEASE PAUL BROTHERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran quarterback Paul Brothers today was released by the British Columbia Lions after three seasons with the Canadian Football League club.

Brothers, 26, was the starting quarterback for the Lions this season, and had been the first-string signal caller since 1969.

The Lions' No. 1 backup quarterback has been Don Moorhead, but coach Eagle Keys did not disclose who will start at quarterback in the Lions next game Sunday against Calgary Stampeders.

Other quarterbacks on the Lions roster are Tom Wilkinson, Rusty Clark and Mike Cavan.

SATO GOVERNMENT SPLIT OVER POLICY ON PEKING

TOKYO (Reuter) — A split has emerged within the Japanese government over its China policy.

Several influential members of the government and ruling Liberal Democratic party, including candidates to succeed Premier Eisaku Sato, have voiced their opposition to Japanese sponsorship of resolutions at the United Nations designed to keep a seat for Taiwan if China is admitted.

The government already has decided to support such moves, but has made no decision whether to take a leading role by co-sponsoring any resolutions.

"It runs counter to a general trend in the world," he said.

The government already has decided to welcome China's admission to the UN after co-sponsoring for many years a resolution which effectively barred Peking.

But cabinet ministers decided to postpone a final decision on how far to maintain its pro-Taiwan stand until the United States administration gave a clear statement of its own intentions.

Make Elk-Beaver Lake Area 'Play Park', Saanich Urged

The Elk Lake-Beaver Lake area of Saanich is a natural as a "play park for the capital region," Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night.

His comment came as the council's parks and outdoor recreation committee was considering proposals for development of municipally operated amusements in the 60-acre area.

A report by parks administrator Bert Richman outlined this six-point plan for the park:

- A possible takeover, under municipal or regional management, of the Wooded Wonderland attraction when the lease on the site expires:
- Provision of parking facilities for about 300 cars:
- A miniature railroad to run from the parking lot entrance around the area on the eastern side of the lakes;
- A zoo featuring both domestic and "non-carnivorous wild animals";
- An archery range;
- Pitch-and-putt course which could be located in the area previously cleared for a golf course;
- A picnic area provided with covered, open air kitchen and power outlets similar to those provided by the B.C. parks branch.

The report said amusements could make the park much more interesting to people of all ages, but in the development care should be taken to preserve the natural attractions by such means as landscaping and use of native materials.

It also pointed out that another factor to consider was the agreement between the municipality and the capital regional board over administration of the park, which expires in five years.

Curtis said it was important to know what the region visualized for the park. He said it was not by any means a wilderness area, and he hoped there would be more intensive use of certain sections.

Ald. William Noel called the proposals "exciting," but both Curtis and Ald. Leslie Passmore expressed doubts about the need for a zoo.

Curtis said while the game farm approach was acceptable, "more and more people are concerned about the confining of wild animals merely for something to do on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon."

The report was referred to council for consideration.

David had two sisters, Dona, 18, and Benita, 9, and a brother, Andra, 10.

The boy's father said he had discussed at breakfast whether he or his son should drive the small car to the city for repair to the starter.

Hajnal said David was keenly interested in sports, particularly soccer and riding.

Two pairs of soccer shoes were among the wreckage scattered along the side of the highway.

U.S., Soviet Navies Confer in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States and Soviet navy personnel will meet in Moscow Oct. 12 to seek ways of avoiding collisions and other sea accidents between the military vessels of the two countries, the state department announced today.

Press officer Charles Bray said it is the first time since the Second World War that the two superpowers have undertaken talks to reduce friction resulting from the proximity of their military forces abroad.

"Over the years we have registered more than 100 reported incidents at sea and know that other reported dangerous situations have arisen," the spokesman said.

The two delegations also will include in their talks airplane overflights, sometimes referred to as "buzzing," in working toward safer operational standards and procedures, he said.

Heading the U.S. delegation will be John W. Warner, undersecretary of the navy. Leading the Soviet delegation will be Vladimir A. Kasatonov, first deputy commander in chief of Soviet naval forces.

PROPOSED BY U.S.

The state department spokesman said the United States first proposed the talks in April, 1968.

He declined to give any specifics on what the U.S. delegation would propose, but said the United States will not agree to anything which would change the international "rules of the road" at sea, nor would it do anything to restrict freedom of the high seas for U.S. naval forces.

Fishing boat incidents are not an item for the discussions, he added.

Warner's mission to Moscow is believed the first in which a high-ranking U.S. defence department official has travelled to the Soviet Union for significant discussion with Soviet authorities.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ratified today a treaty to establish severe penalties for hijacking of airplanes.

Cold Water Tossed On Welfare Job Plan

Industry and labor leaders were pessimistic today about Premier Bennett's plan to find jobs for those on welfare.

The premier Tuesday announced the provincial government would pay half salary of welfare recipients who find jobs starting Nov. 1.

F. G. Peskett, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said subsidies are not sufficient incentives for industry to create new jobs.

"Jobs are created if the demand in the market place requires increased production. You can't make a job that way if it isn't required in the first place."

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said labor will expect far more than the plan offers.

Ryan called on the government to use its fiscal and tax powers as well as government surpluses to "stimulate the economy for real growth."

ADMINISTER

"It is myopic to focus simply on this problem," Ryan said. "There are far greater problems than merely people on welfare."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will head a cabinet committee of four to administer the plan. Campbell said Tuesday as many as 10,000 persons on welfare might be eligible.

Other committee members are Labor Minister James Chabot, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings, Education Minister Donald Brothers and minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy.

TRAINING PLAN

Premier Bennett said the committee has responsibilities "over and above" the job finding programs in Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's department.

Gaglardi has been trying an on-the-job training program for welfare recipients. He said

LIONS RELEASE PAUL BROTHERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran quarterback Paul Brothers today was released by the British Columbia Lions after three seasons with the Canadian Football League club.

Brothers, 26, was the starting quarterback for the Lions this season, and had been the first-string signal caller since 1969.

The Lions' No. 1 backup quarterback has been Don Moorhead, but coach Eagle Keys did not disclose who will start at quarterback in the Lions next game Sunday against Calgary Stampeders.

Other quarterbacks on the Lions roster are Tom Wilkinson, Rusty Clark and Mike Cavan.

SATO GOVERNMENT SPLIT OVER POLICY ON PEKING

TOKYO (Reuter) — A split has emerged within the Japanese government over its China policy.

Several influential members of the government and ruling Liberal Democratic party, including candidates to succeed Premier Eisaku Sato, have voiced their opposition to Japanese sponsorship of resolutions at the United Nations designed to keep a seat for Taiwan if China is admitted.

The government already has decided to support such moves, but has made no decision whether to take a leading role by co-sponsoring any resolutions.

"It runs counter to a general trend in the world," he said.

The government already has decided to welcome China's admission to the UN after co-sponsoring for many years a resolution which effectively barred Peking.

But cabinet ministers decided to postpone a final decision on how far to maintain its pro-Taiwan stand until the United States administration gave a clear statement of its own intentions.

Make Elk-Beaver Lake Area 'Play Park', Saanich Urged

The Elk Lake-Beaver Lake area of Saanich is a natural as a "play park for the capital region," Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night.

His comment came as the council's parks and outdoor recreation committee was considering proposals for development of municipally operated amusements in the 60-acre area.

A report by parks administrator Bert Richman outlined this six-point plan for the park:

- A possible takeover, under municipal or regional management, of the Wooded Wonderland attraction when the lease on the site expires:
- Provision of parking facilities for about 300 cars:
- A miniature railroad to run from the parking lot entrance around the area on the eastern side of the lakes;
- A zoo featuring both domestic and "non-carnivorous wild animals";
- An archery range;
- Pitch-and-putt course which could be located in the area previously cleared for a golf course;
- A picnic area provided with covered, open air kitchen and power outlets similar to those provided by the B.C. parks branch.

The report said amusements could make the park much more interesting to people of all ages, but in the development care should be taken to preserve the natural attractions by such means as landscaping and use of native materials.

It also pointed out that another factor to consider was the agreement between the municipality and the capital regional board over administration of the park, which expires in five years.

Curtis said it was important to know what the region visualized for the park. He said it was not by any means a wilderness area, and he hoped there would be more intensive use of certain sections.

Ald. William Noel called the proposals "exciting," but both Curtis and Ald. Leslie Passmore expressed doubts about the need for a zoo.

Curtis said while the game farm approach was acceptable, "more and more people are concerned about the confining of wild animals merely for something to do on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon."

The report was referred to council for consideration.

'PLAY PARK' proposal for Beaver Lake (left) and Elk Lake would cover 60 acres of land which is at present wooded (immediate foreground). Saanich recreation committee was told Tuesday that the plan would include a possible takeover of the Wooded Wonderland attraction, a zoo, a miniature railroad, and various other amusement. Pollution Levels Proposed

Forest products companies in British Columbia will trim their pollution of air and water in three stages, if recommendations released by Pollution Control Director William Venables Tuesday are adopted as government policy.

New companies would have to meet the most restrictive of the three-tiered standards from the outset, if the Pollution Control Board accepts his recommendations.

The report refers to levels C, B and A and for each there are tables setting out the maximum permissible amount of a variety of pollutants mills handling wood produce. Level A is the most restrictive.

AT LEVEL C

"It is expected that nearly all existing waste discharges are meeting, or soon will be meeting level C, and it is recommended that these discharges be upgraded to interim level B," says Venables' report.

"Ultimately, it is recommended that where feasible within the limits of available technology, all existing discharges be upgraded by means of planned staged improvements to level A.

But the timing of improvements is not specified.

"The timing involved in upgrading existing discharges to meet recommended level B objectives, and subsequently level A objectives, will be determined on an individual basis, with due regard to the existing quality of the environment at each particular location."

EXAMPLES

An example of what the levels mean in the specific case of sulphur dioxide in gas emissions from kraft pulp mills.

Level C calls for a maximum of 300 parts per million, level B's objective is 250 ppm and level A, 200.

In the case of particulate matter from the same stacks, the limit under level C is three pounds per ton of air dried screened pulp produced. Level B cuts the limit to two pounds and level A to 1.5 pounds.

A spokesman for B.C. Forest Products, which operates three mills in the Gorge Road area and a kraft mill at Crofton, said today a team of company specialists would be studying the details of the report and will prepare a comparison of the standards and what the company is achieving in pollution control.

Venables' report notes that "certain aspects of waste discharge problems associated with the forest industry (currently) have no adequate control technology and thus definitive objectives cannot be established at this time.

FOAMING

These aspects, such as effluent color and foaming characteristics, and veneer-drying emissions, should be reviewed periodically with the intent to formulate more definitive objectives."

The report stems from a public inquiry in Vancouver last year which examined technical considerations and measures required of the forest products industry to meet terms of the Pollution Control Act.

Venables wants to use the report's objectives as minimum standards in issuing orders to the industry. He is asking the Pollution Control Board, a separate provincial agency, to adopt the report as policy.

Among topics the report deals with: monitoring waste discharges, in-plant pollution control, kraft and sulphite pulp mill problems and control objectives, emission standards for wood-burning power boilers, open wood waste burners of the "teepee" type, veneer and plywood plants.

It also sets out standards for disposal of solid wastes from the industry together with cleaning and discharge of effluents.

Among points the report makes:

Air and water quality objectives will be verified by monitoring.

MONITORING

Reliable in-plant control of wastes is of primary importance. through recycling and reduction of waste in processing, the problem of treating final waste can be cut.

Hydrogen sulphide, the most troublesome compound from the recovery stacks of Kraft mills, may be virtually eliminated under well-controlled operating conditions.

Tuesday the new program will not conflict with work done in his department.

If initial British Columbia reaction to the Bennett proposal appeared negative, Ontario's minister of social and family services, Thomas Wells says he is studying the B.C. scheme.

Ontario's welfare caseload is runnig 43 per cent higher than last year, including an abnormally high number of single people.

EXTEND SCHEME

Campbell said all the money for the program will come from B.C. It will be separate from the federal Canada Assistance plan which provides for federal funds in some job-creating programs.

Campbell said the committee will re-examine the program's terms of reference as it proceeds. It may decide to extend the scheme beyond the April 30, 1972, deadline.

Public agencies such as municipalities, school boards and hospital boards would be the most likely source of jobs, Campbell said.

An example could be the Gorge Waterway improvement scheme in Saanich. This, said Campbell, is the type of high-quality project with good long term effect that the program will try to find jobs for.

All types of business and industy can quality if they meet the standards, he said.

Legislative approval for the scheme will be sought next year. Special warrants will provide the funds in the meantime, Campbell said.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said today Premier Bennett's subsidy job program for welfare recipients will devastate municipal budgets and tax homeowners off their property.

Barrett condemned the government program announced Tuesday as unworkable, and a subsidy to "explotative industries" which exist on cheap labor.

He counter-attacked with a five-point program highlighted by a call for a 10 per cent surcharge on the sale price of all raw materials leaving British Columbia.

The New Democratic Party leader said B.C. receives only 25 cents a ton on two-thirds of its export coal while receiving nothing from the remaining one-third as well as all copper exports.

He predicted the surcharge would raise $24 million which should immediately be given to municipalities for capital projects.

Barrett's other alternatives include a call for retirement of civil servants at the age of 60 with full pension and an option to retire at 55; construction of a non-polluting steel mill and copper smelter as part of a strongly-increased move to develop manufacturing in the province; a demand that Bennett meet immediately with Prime Minister Trudeau and to request federal legislation requiring all Canadian exports to be carried on Canadian ships with Canada crews; immediate cash grants from government surplus funds to school districts for employment for B.C.'s 1,000 unemployed teachers.

DISCRIMINATES

Barrett said the subsidy scheme by which the province will pay 50 per cent of full wages to welfare recipients is nothing more than a "do it yourself welfare program" which discriminates against persons receiving unemployment insurance.

He said this plan will be a financial disaster for municipalities because they will have to pay more money to hire welfare recipients than they now have to pay for welfare.

Barrett chose the example of a married man with four dependents. Receiving welfare, this man would get $320 per month. The provincial share is $112, federal share $160 and the municipal share $48.

If a municipality hired this man at $3 an hour under the subsidy plan, he would earn $500 a month. The municipal share would be $250, the province would pay the other $250. The federal government would pay nothing because the subsidy plan is not part of the federal Canada Assistance plan, a cost-sharing arrangement.

FORCED TO SELL

"No municipality can afford to support this scheme. If this program were fully implemented, many homeowners who have struggled for years would be forced to sell. There would be no other way out."

Pointing out that industries already have rejected the government's idea, Barrett said only low-wage employers such as Sandringham Private Hospital will benefit.

If a woman on welfare who received $100 a month were to be hired at $1.50 an hour, the Sandringham wage, she would earn $240 a month, Barrett said.

The employer's share would be $120 and the province would pay an identical amount.

"The province will hand that employer $95 a month more to have his worker become one of the working poor," he said.

Barrett described the subsidy plan by using one of Bennett's favorite phrases.

STUPID, STUPID

"It's stupid, stupid, stupid."

Barrett renewed his call for a special legislative session to discuss unemployment.

He also warned that Premier Bennett may use the plan to subsidize new employment for crown agencies out of general revenue.

"There is no reason to doubt if the premier wishes to subsidize the PGE, B.C. Hydro and the ferries that he will not use this plan."

Barrett recalled Bennett used to brag that B.C. is the only province in Canada which does not give subsidies to industries. He said the job subsidy plan is a "disgraceful admission of failure after 20 years of service by the premier."

Canadian Labor Congress secretary-treasurer William Dodge said Tuesday in Ottawa the subsidy plan discriminates against people not on welfare.

Dodge said a well-qualified person seeking a job in B.C. "would have two strikes against him" if another applicant had been on welfare.

Dodge warned the subsidy will "generally downgrade workmanship." A qualified worker with a good job history could easily be passed by for the less-qualified welfare recipient.

He warned the plan negates the generally-accepted move towards greater efficiency and production.

In Victoria, Mayor Courtney Haddock said he is very happy with the premier's announcement.

"This will be a lot better than paying welfare, and I believe in involving private enterprise," he said.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis' reaction was more cautious. "We'll take a very careful look at it," he said.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said today Bennett is trying to head off a leadership challenge by Gaglardi.

McGeer speculated that Campbell was picked to head the committee as Bennett's "hatchet man" to undermine Gaglardi's leadership potential.

CHALLENGE

"It is necessary for Bennett's political survival to head off Gaglardi's challenge, he said.

"He'd be the most likely one to challenge Bennett on his own strength."

McGeer said the Liberal party supports any government initiative to create jobs but added he views this plan as a desperate move with political motives behind it.

McGeer said the subsidy program for welfare recipients was one of Gaglardi's better ideas which Bennett has stolen from him.

At a council meeting Thursday afternoon, aldermen will be asked to formally accept the modified Reid proposal. Regulations will require a public hearing to be held but the date has not been set.

The city clerk's office has noticed a sharp increase in the amount of letters received at city hall opposing the Reid development. Since Aug. 25, a total of 32 such letters were received, 18 of which came from addresses in the city.

Six arrived from Oak Bay, one from Esquimalt, two from View Royal and five from Saanich.

Pollen, the Reid proposal's most persistent critic, said he received 32 letters on the topic Tuesday, and five more today.

COMPROMISES

Despite voting for the modified development, Pollen said today he feels "somewhat let down on my compromises." He said he feared that the compromise he suggested — trading his affirmative vote for a ban on future highrises — may have become "almost a contrivance to get my support."

He noted that council has still not seen the final economic justification for the two proposed towers of 21- and 24-storeys.

Christie openly invited citizens to attend the meeting, saying he wants Victoria's taxpayers to know what council is trying to do.

"The more people show up to oppose this project, the better. The chances it will be scrapped," he said.

He said the two towers proposed for the Reid property will look "like a penitentiary. To me the thought is revolting."

He added that if Reid is allowed to build, "it'll be the most awful thing you've ever seen."

Enrolment Up 4%

Back to school registration in Saanich school district totalled 5,480, indicating a 4 per cent growth rate over the 1970 September enrolment of 5,212. 5,212.

Tom Elwood, director of instruction, said projected figures allowed for this increase.

"Estimates were dead on and we are very pleased," he said Tuesday.

Final figures for registration at Claremont Senior Secondary are not completed. A number of adult students are expected to take advantage of the new fixed timetable at the school.

JITNEY BEATS rival buses to fare in Chicago. (AP Wirephoto)

JITNEYS RIVAL BUSES

CHICAGO (AP) — While transportation costs are rising in most cities a group of black cab drivers on Chicago's South Side are charging only "two bits" — 25 cents — for a ride which may take a passenger up to four miles.

Although the drivers allegedly violate city ordinances governing loading and fixed fares, the jitneys have flourished with passive government consent for more than three decades.

One city alderman, Leon Despres, says the jitneys are a traffic hazard and should be taken off the streets. But he also says the Chicago Transit Authority, which operates at a deficit, should adopt a similar concept for use all over the city.

The jitneys date to the 1930s when they cropped up in numerous cities where blacks were unable to work for white cab companies and white drivers refused to carry blacks. But nowhere are they believed to be as prevalent as along Chicago's Martin Luther King Drive.

Jitney driver Willie Curry says that on a busy day there are 75 of the blue and grey cabs — all licensed by the city — on the 4½-mile stretch of King Drive. The drive, on the mostly black South Side, is the only place they still operate in the city.

MONEY GOOD

Curry claims he makes $75 on a good day.

Passengers shuttle in and out of the cabs, some going only a few blocks while others travel the length of the drive for their 25 cents. A similar trip by regular cab would cost about $1.90. The CTA bus costs 45 cents.

Diving Constable Praised

One of the young student-constables, Doug Morley, employed by Saanich police this summer has been praised by a citizen.

Fred Bell, of 1 Cook Street, told the Times: "There's so much criticism of the police in general these days but no one seems bothered to speak up when the police do a real service to the community."

The incident which led to the police action didn't make headlines but Bell was impressed.

Bell's nephew, nine-year-old Billy Shoemaker, had gone fishing with a friend in the Gorge. The pair was told to take good care of Bell's two rods.

Along came two young persons who started a scuffle and ended up throwing the tackle — some of it fairly expensive — into the Gorge.

Bell said the incident was immediately reported to Saanich police and although descriptions of the youths were taken there seemed little hope of finding the culprits, let alone recovering the rods.

"But Constable Doug Morley said as he was off duty the following day he would bring his diving gear along to look for the rods. Sure enough he did, and found them.

"He need not have bothered at all, and I think it was a really commendable thing to do."

Saanich Police Chief Bert Pearson said today that Morley, 24, of 3501 Salisbury, was one of three UBC law students employed by the department on a trial program this summer.

"The last of them went back to university yesterday," he said, "and I must say we're sorry to see them go. They have been very satisfactory young men."

The city clerk's office has noticed a sharp increase in the amount of letters received at city hall opposing the Reid development. Since Aug. 25, a total of 32 such letters were received, 18 of which came from addresses in the city.

Six arrived from Oak Bay, one from Esquimalt, two from View Royal and five from Saanich.

Pollen, the Reid proposal's most persistent critic, said he received 32 letters on the topic Tuesday, and five more today.

COMPROMISES

Despite voting for the modified development, Pollen said today he feels "somewhat let down on my compromises." He said he feared that the compromise he suggested — trading his affirmative vote for a ban on future highrises — may have become "almost a contrivance to get my support."

He noted that council has still not seen the final economic justification for the two proposed towers of 21- and 24-storeys.

Christie openly invited citizens to attend the meeting, saying he wants Victoria's taxpayers to know what council is trying to do.

"The more people show up to oppose this project, the better. The chances it will be scrapped," he said.

He said the two towers proposed for the Reid property will look "like a penitentiary. To me the thought is revolting."

He added that if Reid is allowed to build, "it'll be the most awful thing you've ever seen."

. . . SUBSIDY

Mr. Benson suggested that the complete answer—withdrawal of the U.S. restrictions—depends on development of a new, international agreement governing currency-exchange rates, making them more closely attuned to market forces of supply and demand.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, the third government minister to speak, said the subsidy program would cover processors of Canadian produce for export—provided the processors continued paying farmers current rates.

DOUBTS EXPRESSED

Opposition parties agreed to waive other business and debate the new bill immediately. But they expressed doubts about its adequacy and motive.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield charged that the bill served too limited a purpose and did nothing to deal with high unemployment existing before the Aug. 15 measures.

David Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, said the government was being deceitful in pretending that $80 million in subsidies would save what he said would amount to 70,000 jobs.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said it is baloney to try to blame the United States for Canadian unemployment, then put up $80 million as a cure. Instead, he said, the government should repeal the 12-per-cent federal tax on manufactured goods to stimulate the economy.

Max Saltsman (Waterloo), NDP financial critic, said the basic problem stemmed from the government's failure to free Canada from virtually-complete economic dependence on the United States.

Enrolment Up 4%

Back to school registration in Saanich school district totalled 5,480, indicating a 4 per cent growth rate over the 1970 September enrolment of 5,212. 5,212.

Tom Elwood, director of instruction, said projected figures allowed for this increase.

"Estimates were dead on and we are very pleased," he said Tuesday.

Final figures for registration at Claremont Senior Secondary are not completed. A number of adult students are expected to take advantage of the new fixed timetable at the school.

JITNEY BEATS rival buses to fare in Chicago. (AP Wirephoto)

JITNEYS RIVAL BUSES

CHICAGO (AP) — While transportation costs are rising in most cities a group of black cab drivers on Chicago's South Side are charging only "two bits" — 25 cents — for a ride which may take u passenger up to four miles.

Although the drivers allegedly violate city ordinances governing loading and fixed fares, the jitneys have flurished with passive government consent for more than three decades.

One city alderman, Leon Despres, says the jitneys are a traffic hazard and should be taken off the streets. But he also says the Chicago Transit Authority, which operates at a deficit, should adopt a similar concept for use all over the city.

The jitneys date to the 1930s when they cropped up in numerous cities where blacks were unable to work for white cab companies and white drivers refused to carry blacks. But nowhere are they believed to be as prevalent as along Chicago's Martin Luther King Drive.

Jitney driver Willie Curry says that on a busy day there are 75 of the blue and grey cabs — all licensed by the city — on the 4½-mile stretch of King Drive. The drive, on the mostly black South Side, is the only place they still operate in the city.

MONEY GOOD

Curry claims he makes $75 on a good day.

Passengers shuttle in and out of the cabs, some going only a few blocks while others travel the length of the drive for their 25 cents. A similar trip by regular cab would cost about $1.90. The CTA bus costs 45 cents.

Diving Constable Praised

One of the young student-constables, Doug Morley, employed by Saanich police this summer has been praised by a citizen.

Fred Bell, of 1 Cook Street, told the Times: "There's so much criticism of the police in general these days but no one seems bothered to speak up when the police do a real service to the community."

The incident which led to the police action didn't make headlines but Bell was impressed.

Bell's nephew, nine-year-old Billy Shoemaker, had gone fishing with a friend in the Gorge. The pair was told to take good care of Bell's two rods.

Along came two young persons who started a scuffle and ended up throwing the tackle — some of it fairly expensive — into the Gorge.

Bell said the incident was immediately reported to Saanich police and although descriptions of the youths were taken there seemed little hope of finding the culprits, let alone recovering the rods.

"But Constable Doug Morley said as he was off duty the following day he would bring his diving gear along to look for the rods. Sure enough he did, and found them.

"He need not have bothered at all, and I think it was a really commendable thing to do."

Saanich Police Chief Bert Pearson said today that Morley, 24, of 3501 Salisbury, was one of three UBC law students employed by the department on a trial program this summer.

"The last of them went back to university yesterday," he said, "and I must say we're sorry to see them go. They have been very satisfactory young men."

bob and anne buy their first home

No family yet. But maybe. Someday. How big a house to buy today — for tomorrow? How much is a realistic down payment? Bob's salary is modest. But his ambitions are high. Anne works too. How much can they afford to pay each month?

CAN THEY GET A FIRST MORTGAGE? And how big should it be? What if they need a second mortgage?

At your local credit union we have the answers to all those questions and some that Bob and Anne haven't even thought up yet.

Not only will we answer their questions, we'll arrange a first or second mortgage for them at one of the best interest rates in town.

If you need a mortgage drop in to your local credit union. You won't regret it. We lend a helping hand.

Back-to-School Smash Leaves 2 Dead, 16 Hurt

BURNABY (CP) — A pickup truck crammed with students on their way to school Tuesday collided with another truck and slammed into a power pole, killing two and injuring at least 16.

RCMP said the truck, driven by Derek Dulmage of this municipality adjacent to Vancouver, was carrying 19 teen-agers to Burnaby Central High School for the opening days of classes when it collided with a larger truck carrying a heavy piece of machinery.

Eight ambulances from four centres and a fire rescue squad took the dead and injured to hospitals.

The dead were identified as Michael Karpins, 15, and David Robert Welsh, 16, both of Burnaby.

Police said most of the students, including two girls, were riding in the back of the small truck when the collision occurred on a hill. They were thrown out of the truck and scattered for about 40 feet along Canada Way, a main artery through Burnaby.

Five of the injured were reported in critical condition. The driver of the larger truck was not injured.

Firemen at the scene said a registered nurse and several citizens helped treat the victims. One held the head of a youth whose legs were pinned inside the rear of the truck.

Police said Welsh — son of a Vancouver city policeman — was dead on arrival at hospital. Karpins died later.

Cause of the accident had not been determined.

Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster put its disaster plan into effect to handle the injured, cancelling all day-care and non-emergency operations.

All available doctors in the hospital were called into the emergency ward to treat those in serious condition. Those with less serious injuries were later transferred to another hospital.

In a rush-hour traffic jam created by the accident, a police car and a car driven by a fire chief collided near the original accident. There were no serious injuries in the collision.

U.S. Tax To Cost Canada $400 Million, Many Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Dollar losses of somewhere between $400 million and $900 million, jobs reduced by 40,000 to 90,000 — this is the level of economic clout foreseen by Canadian industry as a result of the 10-per-cent U.S. surtax on imports.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin told the Commons Tuesday his department carried out a survey of Canadian industry after President Nixon announced the surtax last month.

He gave this forecast of loss of export sales to the U.S. based on a survey of 1,300 Canadian firms:

- $400 million in a full year if the surtax stays in effect three months.
- $700 million over a full year if the surtax lasts six months.
- $900 million in a year if the surtax lasts a year.

Disappearance of jobs, on the same annual basis, would be 40,000 if the tax lasts three months, 70,000 if it goes six months and 90,000 if it lasts 12 months.

Pepin said some 150 companies said they would have difficulty surviving if the import surtax lasted a year. The employ about 45,000 workers.

The survey showed that 73 companies would consider relocating all or part of their Canadian operations to the U.S. if the surtax lasted a year.

The department reached 1,700 Canadian industrial firms in the survey, Pepin told the House.

Some said that they faced shutdown because of the U.S. move. Others felt they would be able to weather the situation. But the consensus was that the U.S. action would turn out to be "very damaging indeed" for Canadian industry, Pepin said.

The greatest uncertainty in the whole situation is how long the U.S. surtax will last, the minister said. The Canadian government did not know.

And in New York, William Bundy, a former U.S. under-secretary of state, says the United States' new economic measures could be a "dynamite" abroad if Canada is typical.

In a column in Newsweek magazine, Bundy says that President Nixon's economic program, which includes a 10-per-cent additional levy on dutiable imports, "looks like exporting real political trouble to the north."

He said that Canadian-American relations were not the best even before the new economic measures, partly because of the American tendency to take Canada for granted and partly because of American cultural pressure and influence.

The new duty would not hurt Canada that much. But it had become a political rather than an economic issue. At the same time it hit small enterprises in Ontario and Quebec where Trudeau had support.

CN CUTS FARES 25% FOR ELDERLY

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian National Railways announced today reduced fares for persons 65 years or older to take effect Oct. 2.

The railway said in a statement the fares, reduced 25 per cent, will be available to persons holding special CN identification cards and will apply to travel originating any day except Friday, Sunday or during peak seasons.

Identification cards are available for $3 each at CN passenger sales offices.

Militant Students Keep Teachers Out

STURGEON FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A militant core of French-speaking students forcibly prevented some teachers and staff members from entering Sturgeon Falls secondary school for a time today.

The students, who are demanding a separate French-language school, moved from door to door of the school and engaged in a number of shoving matches with arriving teachers.

There were no injuries and no arrests as municipal police stayed on the sidelines. All those who wished to enter the building eventually did so. The school has a total staff of about 105.

Meantime, the demonstrators — comprising a hard core of about 17 students — made no attempt to prevent other students from entering, as had been their strategy Tuesday when registration for the fall term began.

About 820 students of an expected total enrolment of 1,600 managed to register Monday, including 440 for the French section and 380 for the English section. French-speakers outnumber Anglophones two-to-one in the total student population.

Some teachers, most of them members of the French staff, remained outside the school as classes began today. The French-speaking staff earlier issued a statement supporting the student demands for a new high school.

Monday night, the Nipissing board of education met at North Bay, 20 miles east of here, to discuss the student strike in which the Francophones set up pickets and waved placards reading We Want Our School, Death to the Board and Yes Sir, It's War.

The board refused to reconsider its decision to reject a proposal to establish separate French- and English-speaking high schools. The proposal had been made by the board's French-language advisory committee and was supported by the majority of the community's French-speaking residents.

Eighty-seven per cent of the community population of 7,000 is French-speaking.

A motion was passed at the board meeting to ask Education whether the province "would tion Minister Robert Welch be prepared to enter into a contractual obligation to pay extraordinary grants to pay the costs which would result should the board build a separate bilingual school in Sturgeon Falls and should the pupil-teacher ratio there fall 10 per cent or more below the average ratio in the balance of the district in subsequent years."

Board chairman D. C. Doney said later that as far as the board is concerned the Sturgeon Falls school will remain open for regular classes and teachers are expected to be present.

Edward Monkman, director of education for the board, said that if the French-speaking students continue their protest actions, he would ask for a court injunction or take some other "appropriate action."

Dr. Laycock Funeral On Thursday

VANCOUVER (CP) — Funeral services will be held Thursday for educational psychologist Dr. Samuel Laycock.

Dr. Laycock, who died Sunday at the age of 80, was dean emeritus of education at the University of Saskatchewan and a lecturer at the University of British Columbia.

In 1970 he was awarded the medal of service of the Order of Canada for his work in the educational field.

During his career, Dr. Laycock, born in Marmora, Ont., wrote 11 books and more than 700 articles for educational journals.

He is survived by a sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Laycock of Marmora, and a niece in Edmonton.

The Customers Complain

TWO OFFICIAL REPRESENTATIVES of the Japanese steel industry visiting in British Columbia have had some hard words to say about Canadian coal deliveries under the vast 9.5 million-tons-a-year deal which got under way a little more than a year ago. Deliveries are running at only 70 per cent of the agreed production, the Japanese are "sick and tired" of hearing Canadian requests for an increased price, the Japanese steel industry is "deeply disappointed" in the Canadian showing.

It's an understandable mistake, of course, because the coal is obviously coming from Canada, but the Japanese steel men ought to be lodging the main part of their protest, not in Vancouver, but with Henry Kaiser interests' head office. For "Canadians" actually have little to do with the process of moving the mountain of coal from southern B.C. to Japan. Apart from a nominal interest through the transport contract with the CPR, and some millions of dollars of public money invested in the Roberts Bank coal-loading terminal, the rest of the game — including ownership — is largely American.

Kaiser Resources at Sparwood have a contract for 5 million tons a year of the 9.5 million tons in the total agreement. The other tonnage comes from four Alberta mines. Ten months after the first load was moved to tidewater, the Kaiser operation was running at only three-fifths of the required rate, although this reportedly has now been stepped up to 88 per cent. The company's loss on the 1970 part of the operation was announced as $4.7 millions, due to start-up costs, and pre-production expenses. But Kaiser also controls the subsidiary, Westshore Terminals, which handles the coal at Roberts Bank, and has a 45-year lease on the 1,400-acre loading area which public money built. The automatic operation requires only five men a shift.

If the Japanese visitors probe a little more deeply they may find that many Canadians do not cheer the sight of millions of tons of irreplacable coal being shipped out of the country with a bare minimum of domestic payroll participation in the process and a lamentable lack of Canadian ideas as to what might more profitably be done with this gradually dwindling natural resource.

When the mine eventually is a big hole and the last load of coal has been consumed in Japanese mills, what exactly will Canadians have to congratulate themselves on as a result of the 15-year export effort? For Canada, apparently, there will have been minimal wage revenue, minimal profits, minimal tax revenues. But lots of cheering and government preening.

There has been, of course, vast investment by companies concerned, but modern mechanized methods of mining and handling do not mean the jobs-for-everyone benefits that big export orders traditionally entailed. And present-day subsidies, rebates, depreciation allowances, loss deductions, and other taxation arrangements mean that the state coffers may not benefit greatly even from large-scale operations.

There must be a detailed explanation of all this somewhere, but the cheering has always been so loud that no one could quite hear it.

Foolish Risk

LITTLE SYMPATHY WILL BE extended to the driver of a speedboat who towed a water skier across the path of a B.C. Ferry in Active Pass and paid a $300 fine upon conviction for operating his boat dangerously.

This seems to have been a game of Russian roulette with a difference. The captain of the ferry says his craft would have hit the offender if the ferry had not taken emergency action. That emergency action could, under certain circumstances, have jeopardized the safety of the vessel and its passengers.

The case, tried in Victoria, should provide its own warning to other speedboat drivers who tow water skiers in a manner which creates serious risks, not only for the boat operator and the skier but for others sharing the water. The situation at Shawnigan Lake, for instance, frequently rouses complaint from local residents who anticipate, with some concern, the occurrence of a serious accident there. Other mishaps have occurred on the lake — as they have on other relatively confined bodies of water.

Because some boat owners take foolish risks, the possibility of strict regulations curtailing the sport loom larger each year. Better if the boat operators showed consideration and common sense. If they don't, somebody else will have to restrict their activities.

Individual and State

IN AN INTERVIEW AFTER HIS election as new president of the Canadian Bar Association Mr. John Farris remarked: "We're living in a collectivist age, and society says it comes first rather than the individual ... and law will have to develop some balance to this conflict." In speaking up for a proper balance between the rights of the individual and the needs of society Mr. Farris is giving voice to the perennial liberal inclination to check and balance forces so that there may be a healthy equilibrium.

Mr. Farris has an advanced point of view: he supports computerization of all Canadian law, modernization of trial procedures and simplifying of legal terminology, to name a few of the elements of his philosophy.

There will be times, he seems to be saying, when social imperatives will come first; there will be other times when the individual will have to be defended against the inroads of government. In establishing day to day priorities Mr. Farris and the Canadian Bar will have critical work to do. They share in the great responsibility, and the great rewards, of ensuring the rights of the individual.

Unprintable

BECAUSE THE CONNOTATIONS of finger-printing are so repugnant to a large body of Canadians, the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police can expect little success for its recommendation that the practice be voluntarily accepted by all citizens.

A spokesman for the chiefs says: "We want to make it clear that we're not backing into identification cards." He explains that finger-printing would be valuable for identification purposes in case of such tragedies as air crashes.

It can be argued that finger-printing for identification in these cases should not be dismissed because of lasting prejudice. But that prejudice is deeply ingrained in many law-abiding citizens. And though the assurance that the chiefs are not "backing into identification cards" may be credible, the fact remains that universal printing would supplant identity cards without "backing in."

Finger-printing is almost inseparably associated with criminals or police states. For that reason it remains distasteful to a very large part of the Canadian population.

". . . where do people get the idea that just because you're 71 and may be slowing down a bit, and just because I'm younger and ready to lead this province to even greater prosperity and riches, that you're ready to step down . . .?"

FROM TOKYO — By JAMES RESTON

Asian Leaders Wonder at Nixon's Lunges

IN this part of the world, officials don't quite know what to make of President Nixon. They understand and even approve the logic of his moves in defence of the dollar and for better relations with China, but they don't understand his timing, his tactics or his style. In Peking, they thought he was almost too complimentary about China's big-power role in the world. "We are not a superpower but still an underdeveloped country," they said. In Tokyo, they thought he was too sudden and too insensitive in the way he launched his new China and new economic policies.

Reston

In both places, officials seemed to be troubled by questions of manner and style. Peking was obviously pleased that Nixon wanted to come to Peking to talk things over, and Tokyo knew something had to be done about Washington's domestic and foreign economic difficulties, but why the dramatic moves in the night, the startling economic announcements without prior consultation?

Compliments

In a way, both capitals pay the United States a compliment by their criticism. They have both been on the fringes of world affairs in recent years. In different ways, they think of Washington as the centre of world politics, even if they don't always agree. But these sudden lunges by Nixon into Peking, into Cambodia and Laos, and into a wholly new economic policy make them wonder.

Peking reacted to Nixon's overtures with calculated calm. They printed the spare official communique about the president's visit and then ignored it. The Tokyo government, but not the Japanese press or opposition politicians, played the whole thing down.

But both Peking's indifference and the Tokyo government's elaborate calm about recent developments are probably highly misleading, and each in its own way has a grievance which is expressed more in private than in public.

Melodrama

Peking's grievance is that Washington, by the melodramatic Kissinger visit to Peking, gave the impression that it was about to "normalize" diplomatic relations with China, and then announced a "two-China" policy in the United Nations, which it must have known could not possibly be the basis for "normal relations" with Peking.

More than that, since the Kissinger visit, the Peking officials feel that Washington has reacted to the predictable complaints of Japan and Taiwan as if the president had not expected opposition from these quarters when he sent Kissinger to Peking in the first place.

Secretary of State Rogers' speech to the American Legion in Houston illustrates what troubles both Peking and Tokyo. "The drama of the developments in our policy toward Peking and the strains of recent imbalances in United States-Japanese trade," Rogers said, "have to some extent partially obscured the fundamental significance of United States ties to Japan."

But in both Peking and Tokyo, the point is being made that Washington arranged "the drama of developments" in Washington-Peking relations and must have known that this would upset the Tokyo government, just as the president's new economic policy suddenly startled the political and business community in Japan.

In this part of the world, as at home, there may be a certain admiration for the Nixon administration's ability to announce dramatic diplomatic and economic policies which reverse the policies of the past, but these sudden switches also raise serious doubts.

Why was the potential power of China, and the developing economic crisis in the United States not faced long before?

Why have a U.S.-Japanese cabinet committee to review relations between the two countries and call it into session only after the U.S. has startled not only Japan but the world with a policy that repudiates Washington's trade and monetary policies of the past?

More than most people, Asians don't like to be surprised. They may bow in Tokyo, as is their custom, when they are reversed by a nation on whom they depend for military and economic security, but their official courtesy and acquiescence are probably misleading.

What Next?

The problem here in Tokyo and to a lesser extent in Peking after all this is that officials don't quite know what to expect next. Maybe the Democrats and even the "regular" Republicans are in the same boat. They recognize the problems and even admire the president's willingness to reverse and even defy his past policies and principles, but they are left without much confidence about where we all go from here.

This is really the problem now in Asia so far as its future relations with Washington are concerned. Nixon has demonstrated his flexibility and his pragmatism, but where will this lead next month or next year? These are the private questions one hears in Tokyo and Peking, and they are stated in private much more strongly than in public.

FROM CALGARY — By JAMES H. GRAY

The Capital Gains Tax: A Problem for Mr. Lougheed

IN the closing stages of the Alberta election campaign Premier Strom made a point which may return to haunt his Conservative Party successor, Peter Lougheed. It was to Alberta's advantage, Strom allowed, to be governed by a party without affiliation with either major federal party. This enabled Alberta representatives at Dominion-provincial conferences to stand aloof from the partisan infighting which characterized the behavior of Grits and Tories.

Gray

All Alberta had to do was hew to the line that was best for Alberta. Then, as if to underline this obvious special plea, he launched his attack on Edgar Benson's capital gains tax. This, he said, would inhibit capital investment in Alberta just when it was most needed.

Unexpectedly and unintentionally, the Strom ball now lands at the Lougheed feet. Where does he stand on the capital gains tax issue? With the Federal Conservatives who support it, or with many of the Canadian independents in Alberta who reject it?

Mr. Lougheed's main strength is in the Alberta cities and towns. The city businessmen are the prime targets of the capital gains tax. The farmers can build up their estates over the years and, to all practical purposes, be exempt from the tax. If Lougheed does what comes naturally to a politician, he may embarrass his party nationally. If not he may antagonize some of his staunchest supporters.

Dilemma

There is no easy way out of Lougheed's dilemma for, as the conventioning legal beagles were demonstrating at Banff last week, it is far from an easy problem. They produced 32 position papers to argue for a delay in implementing the tax reforms until they could be drafted in understandable English, if not understandable French.

A capital gains tax for Canada is certainly one of the hairiest of all the so-called reforms. It comes with built-in loop holes through which international conglomerates can sail with impunity. To the Canadians in the petroleum business, the Benson capital gains tax will be a tax haven for their foreign competition.

The great American multi-national corporations might well be described as joint stock company immortality. They go on forever, growing and growing, expanding and expanding, buying and buying. And because they never sell, they are exempt from capital gains taxes.

A typical case would be the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. It has owned 70-odd per cent of Imperial Oil of Canada for over 70 years. Jersey has seen the value of its capital investment in Imperial Oil double and redouble, and then double and redouble again. As this growth was reflected in the worth of Jersey, the value of Jersey shares would rise. Jersey shareholders who lived in the United States could take their profits and pay a capital gains tax on them. But they would pay the tax, which resulted from Canadian growth, to Washington not to Ottawa.

Drafters Aware

The drafters of the Benson white paper were aware of the problem of non-realized capital gains. They included provisions for valuation of company assets every five years and the levying of capital gains taxes on the increment. The naivete of Ottawa tax-thinking was quickly exposed however when they could give no answer to this question: How could Ottawa levy its capital gains tax on the unrealized capital gains of companies like Jersey Standard which were domiciled abroad?

The five-year evaluation was junked. Which means of course that no capital gains tax will ever be collected on 75% of the capital growth of Canadian industry which is owned abroad. Only Canadians will pay it, which will make it more difficult than ever for them to compete with foreign capital in the Canadian economy.

The capital gains tax, for example, will inhibit growth through amalgamation of small Canadian enterprises into large and more efficient companies. Each time there is an exchange of shares there will be a tax liability for capital gains. And this, it is argued, will make many otherwise viable deals unworkable.

Meanwhile in Alberta Lougheed has expressed deep concern for the plight of Canadians who are handicapped by our tax laws. He has promised to set up a $200-million capital fund to assist Canadian free-enterprisers. Himself a former tax lawyer for the Mannix interests, Lougheed has a detailed knowledge of the competitive handicaps of Canadian investors in Canadian enterprise. But whose thinking does he follow? Harry Strom's or Robert Stanfield's?

His health is perfect, his voice unimpaired, his strength is inexhaustible. He is manifestly enjoying every minute of it.

Pound Complaint

One may well wonder if the SPCA does, in fact, stand for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Monday we were in a hurry to get to work and did not take the usual precaution with our faithful Lab pup, Duchess, that we normally do, making sure that she was secure in the yard. She proceeded to follow the car, without our noticing, right down to Burnside Gardens, a mile or better from our place — a long journey for a four-month-old pup. The first indication of the plight of our pup was a frantic call from my son trying to reach me at the office — the Saanich pound had collected the dog.

On the way home from work I stopped in at the pound and finally found Duchess in a pen with three full-grown males, literally chewing her up.

I went out front to pay the $7 fine and found that the municipality of Saanich does not take a cheque. By this time I was starting to mutter about our so-called democratic society, and drove to the family garage to cash a cheque. Upon returning to the SPCA, I paid the fine and then to add injury to insult, the keeper dragged our pup forward to the front office by a rope tied around the bare neck of the dog — rope strong enough to hold a Shetland pony, and with such unconcern as to cause her to choke and gag. To make this a memorable occasion for both pup and myself, the keeper set the heavy door on the pup's leg, causing an uproar of screams and cries. I blew my cool and let loose with a string of profanity at a society that was set up to prevent cruelty to animals.

It would seem that better qualified training of staff and a little "common sense" would have prevented an unfortunate incident that will long be remembered. — W. H. Cotton, 785 Tulip.

Police Budget

Law enforcement, in these desperate times, is an onerous task not many of us would care to contemplate; few people would want to change places with a policeman.

It is reported that our elected City representatives recently awarded the police a 21 per cent salary raise which they said, on behalf of the taxpayers, was a justified increase.

How shocking it now is to read a press article under the headline "Police Productivity Should Rise"; a public statement attributed to a City alderman. He appears to be pushing our policemen by suggesting that they must "milk" the hard pressed public for $87,000 more in fines because City Hall is that much short in its 1971 budget by what is going into the pockets of policemen.

Many of us hoped that the policemen's "work to rule" plan would continue as the set standard of law enforcement everywhere and at all times. If "working to rule" is now to be regarded as redundant in law what is the reason for its existence? Why should a policeman be urged to put his rules aside in order to aid an ailing budget?

If the police force is to take this civic attitude as a warning that wage demands in the future will have to be met by increased charges against the public, then law enforcement becomes a farce. — Clarence Goode, 1840 St. Ann.

Mail Boxes

How long do we have to suffer the incompetence and inconvenience of the present marking of Post Office Boxes? Why are the times of collection not marked on each box, as was customary in the past? The present notice on the boxes is almost unreadable because of fading, and even if readable, gives no information about when the box will be next cleared. — E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

Peace in Our Time: Suddenly It Seems Possible

NEW STATESMAN
An Editorial

The recent actions of the U.S. Administration have brought to an end an era not just in world economics but in world politics.

Finding their resources so overstretched, the Americans have curtly abdicated as the world's number one nanny. In a few months' time we shall all be talking not about Fort Knox but of Fortress America.

★ ★ ★

Since the American financial and political umbrella has been held aloft for a quarter of a century it is not surprising that many people and some governments find it difficult to believe that Uncle Sam has suddenly decided that there is no room beneath it for anyone but himself.

Yet the change was inevitable and had been foreshadowed in numerous speeches — not least that made at his Inauguration by President Nixon.

No one knows better than the man who was their candidate that those who make up the 'silent majority' of Middle America today resent foreign entanglements. They want their own lives made softer, not their dependencies made stronger.

Ironically, one of the first fruits of this new age of "America first" has been the agreement over West Berlin. It should be welcomed unreservedly—not merely for what it contains but also for the ice-breaking potential it holds out for the future.

After World War Two, standing amidst the ruins of the old order and recognizing Britain's decline, the Americans felt they had no choice other than to accept the active leadership of the West. Their reasoning was that if they did not fill the power vacuum then the U.S.S.R. would.

In those palmy days the U.S. did not have to cut her political coat to suit her economic cloth. Incomparably the richest and most productive nation in the world, her not entirely disinterested concern was to restore a measure of economic prosperity to others so that they could provide her with needed markets.

As a result of the Bretton Woods agreement and of the later Truman Doctrine the U.S. built a powerful political and financial empire which has lasted for two generations.

But any country facing the loss of an empire — as Dean Acheson once pointedly reminded us — has to find a new role. That is what America is now seeking to do.

★ ★ ★

Her empire may have collapsed less dramatically than the British one — but it has crumbled all the same. Some former dependencies, like France, have gone their own political way. Others, like Japan and West Germany, have concentrated on establishing their own economic independence.

Americans are as selfish — and as vulnerable to a sense of resentment at other people's 'ingratitude' — as the rest of us. Pride follows prestige just as surely as trade was once supposed to follow the flag.

The mood of idealistic imperialsim of the immediate past is now quite dead in America. It has been replaced by an almost bitter determination to see to it that 'undeserving" allies and 'ungrateful' client states should now shoulder some of the burdens which Americans themselves have suddenly discovered to be oppressive.

The Americans cannot expect to gain any popularity from their new devil-may-care attitude towards the rest of the world. The Japanese, in particular, are furious that they were not consulted about President Nixon's projected visit to Peking and — even worse — about American pressure (taken in flagrant defiance of the rules of the IMF) to get them to revalue the yen and reduce their textile exports to the U.S.

As a result not so much of the content of America's policy as of its arrogant conduct, Japanese-U.S. relations have plummeted to their lowest point since the earliest days of the MacArthur viceroyalty.

★ ★ ★

Of course, as a politician of the plain who does not believe in lifting his eyes to the hills, President Nixon has never been particularly sensitive to international susceptibilities. He knows that Americans want unemployment down and domestic economic activity up. If he achieves that objective but incurs international unpopularity in the process he is confident that Americans in the end will count it to him for virtue.

Mr. Nixon will pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship in order to get himself re-elected.

But there is another side to the coin. The clearest sign of the advantages for the world in the new "low-profile" America came last month with the news about West Berlin. The Americans have swallowed their pride and turned their back on the Kennedy messianic rhetoric in order to make a deal which could — and indeed should — have been made years ago.

The U.S.S.R. gains much more from the agreement than the Americans do. Quite apart from the satisfaction of putting the East Germans in their place, the Russians can congratulate themselves on having demonstrated that West Berlin is not in practice part of the Federal Republic but must in future be considered almost as a third German state.

The U.S. has had the wisdom to see that these successes for Russian diplomacy are not reverses for the West. The citizens of Herr Brandt's Federal Republic will value highly the fact that they and the West Berliners should shortly be able to enter East Berlin on the same terms as everyone else. On its Western side there is now a large hole in the Berlin Wall. As Willy Brandt's Ostpolitik is Europe's best chance for a permanent settlement, anything that assists it benefits us all.

★ ★ ★

Now that the Berlin portcullis seems about to be lifted, hopes must also be rising for a successful outcome to the SALT talks.

President Nixon's policy is certainly motivated by the most naked form of self-interest: but in Europe, as in Asia, it is having the effect of making war less likely.

The Cold War may not be over, but there is now an armistice out of which could yet develop at long last a European settlement.

Chill Winds Of Fall Cool Hellyer Dream

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

There is a glint of steel in the gaze of Action Canada these days, that kind of knowing look that comes when all the dreams of infancy begin to melt away.

It wasn't there last May when Paul Hellyer trotted out his 24 founding fathers and proudly pinned them with those green and white lapel badges that were supposed to signal the beginning of a new era in Canadian politics.

It wasn't there in June when Mr. Hellyer, beaming in front of the television cameras, unveiled the first results of his proselytizing among the heathen ranks of Liberal, Tory, New Democrat and Socred. "As of today the membership of Action Canada is," he said, pausing imperceptibly before he delivered the punch line, "two thousand five hundred and eighty-three."

●

Nor was it there in July when he released the news that Action Canada was forced to open five regional offices across the country to handle the flood of new converts. An average daily recruitment of 200 to the faith, he said, confidently predicting a membership of 10,000 by the end of the month.

It was in August that the first hint of maturity began to overtake Mr. Hellyer's experiment in political party building. Only 95 turned up to hear him speak to an organizational meeting of Action Canada cells in three federal ridings in Toronto. The three ridings could only boast a combined membership of 200 although organizers were quietly stating they wouldn't mind if it rose to 600. "They don't have to be made public," Mr. Hellyer answered icily when asked how many had joined his movement. "The established parties don't release figures either."

. . . hint of maturity

●

And now, with the first chill winds of September, Action Canada appears to be entering its own personal autumn. Mr. Hellyer is still planning an October convention but all those early predictions of mass movements have become secret, confidential weapons.

"We're expecting an election this fall," he said in Halifax. "Mr. Trudeau is not telling us his strength and we're not revealing our strategic information." So much for that groundswell of grass roots support that was supposed to herald a new kind of party politics in Canada.

Shock Waves In Chinatown

By MIN S. YEE

SAN FRANCISCO — President Nixon's announcement that he will visit Mainland China and seek the normalization of relations with Peking has deeply shaken the largest Chinese settlement outside Asia — San Francisco's Chinatown.

In Portsmouth Square, where community elders sit in the afternoon sun and kibbitz around the Chinese chess tables; along Grant Avenue, Chinatown's main shopping throughfare; and side streets such as Waverly Place, jammed with small trading companies, community attitudes and allegiances are shifting quietly but quickly away from Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist regime on Taiwan.

The repercussions have already been so great that James G. H. Shen, the Nationalist ambassador to Washington, found it necessary to fly to San Francisco twice in one week to shore up some badly battered loyalties.

Consul Replaced

The week after Mr. Nixon's announcement, the Nationalist government replaced its consul-general here. Former consul-general P. H. Chou, considered unimaginative by many, was succeeded by C. C. Tuan, a pleasant fast-talking public relations-conscious diplomat.

Like the government in Taipei, the Chinese nationalists in Washington and in San Francisco are unabashedly angry about Mr. Nixon's new two-Chinas approach.

The Nationalists are worried about the fast-changing political tides in which their presence here and in Washington may eventually be supplanted by officials from Mainland China.

Conservatives

"We are Americans," said Chou. "We don't want interference from either foreign government in Chinatown. The problem is that those who have been for change, for progress in the Chinese community, have been hampered by conservatives who oftentime were allied with a foreign government."

The conservatives Chou spoke of are in a coterie of Chinese businessmen and Kuomintang agents who control the Chinatown power structure through organizations like the Chinese Six Companies, the various family associations, the Tongs (now called merchants associations) and the Anti-Communist League.

The six Companies in San Francisco presents itself as the spokesman for all Chinese throughout the country. This was more nearly the case 40 years ago. Today, its blue-tiled headquarters on Stockton Street is known among Chinese as a backwater of conservatism and as a front for the Kuomintang.

FIRST SHIPMENT of commercial goods from Mainland China to the U.S. in more than 20 years arrived in San Francisco earlier this summer. An importer opens case of canned food delicacies.

After President Nixon announced his intention of visiting China, both the Six Companies and the Anti-Communist League sent Mr. Nixon telegrams urging him not to go. Four blocks away, liberal Chinese who formed the Chinese Cultural Foundation voted unanimously to include President Nixon as an honorary member of the foundation, "in recognition of his dedicated efforts toward a worldwide peace and the betterment of American relationships with Mainland China."

Kuomintang officials gather at The Light Company, operated by Importer Wong Ying Doon.

Doon, a balding man in his mid-60s, paced the cement floors of his storefront office, waving his arms, "Tell them not to go," he yelled, extending a pudgy finger toward a reporter's notebook. "Tell Nixon not to go. This is not good for the U.S. We've been longtime good friends. Why should he do this to us? He broke his promises."

George Lee, a retired office worker, another Anti-Communist League official sitting in Doon's office, spoke of discrimination. "Face it," he said. "We're stuck over here. Who's going to change your face or color? You can't do anything about that. Who's going to stand up for you?

When we look at China, at least we see that someone's fighting back for us against this discrimination."

Lee added, "This is the first time the U.S. has kow-towed to China. Mao didn't ask to come here. Nixon asked to go there. I'm kind of proud of Mao."

Confusion

For Chinatown, it is a period of confusion and transition but, in the end, if there is a complete reapproachment with China, resulting in diplomatic recognition of the People's Republic, the effect on Chinatown will be cataclysmic. Recognition would presumably also mean the establishment of a Chinese communist consulate here in San Francisco.

Liberal Chinese greet that possibility with mixed emotions. They know that an end to Kuomintang influence will turn the power structure around 180 degrees. Most importantly, it will mean a major shift in economic power within the community.

With the easing of trade restrictions, Chinese here are certain that the Chinese communist exporters will not deal with those merchants who based their businesses and fortunes on special trade concessions from the Taiwan-based regime.

Chinese here concede that Mainland China's products, with a few exceptions, such as canned fruit, are of better quality than Taiwan's. China can also provide a much greater variety of goods. Taiwan will simply not be able to compete.

Pollution Fight New NATO Task

By DONALD STAINSBY

(A fornier Times staff member, Vancouver writer Don Stainsby is now travelling in Europe. His reports will appear in the Times from time to time.)

BRUSSELS — For the past 18 months the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has been taking a new — and largely unsung — heading.

And it is one that the Canadian government, by implication at least, and senior members of the Canadian delegation highly approve of.

It was in November, 1969, that NATO formed, following a suggestion by President Nixon, a new Committee on the Challenges of Modern Society.

It is, in effect, an alliance-wide battle to improve the environment, to fight pollution.

And, according to Charles Marshall, deputy permanent representative of Canada and number two man to the permanent representative and ambassador to NATO, Ross Campbell, it stands a fair chance of success.

Leading Role Played By Canada

Marshall points out that NATO's two primary functions are still its keystone — the physical security of the alliance and political consultation among its members.

"And the major feature of the alliance has been the success achieved over the years of getting the 15 governments to exchange views in the first place, and consequently to achieve a measure of consensus," Marshall told me.

This, he believes, makes NATO's entry into pollution and environmental problems hopeful.

NATO has proven its ability in getting things done, according to Marshall, who came to his office last December in the temporary NATO headquarters, set in unkempt lawns on the outskirts of the Belgian capital near its airport, after a stint as head of the NATO section in external affairs at Ottawa.

(Marshall, incidentally, is a graduate of the University of B.C. where he wrote a column for the sports section of The Ubyssey when his editor was Chick Turner, now better known as Canada's minister of justice, John Turner.)

Marshall expects and hopes that NATO's habit of consultation leading to consensus and then getting on with the job will be valuable in the new environmental role, which is aimed at "co-ordinating policy on environmental issues that transcend national boundaries."

Various countries take on specific problems, becoming in NATO parlance the pilot country. Other countries interested in the problem become co-pilots.

The U.S. is pilot country on two projects — the clean car and the safe car, with various co-pilots. Belgium is pilot country on oil spills, with Canada, France and Portugal as co-pilots.

Canada's big push as pilot country is concerned with the pollution of rivers and lakes, particularly international waterways.

Her co-pilots are Belgium, France and the U.S.

Last March the four nations set as a general goal: the identification, testing and demonstration of the elements, mechanisms and instruments for effective inland water quality management in an interjurisdictional setting.

Canada has designated the comprehensive river basin planning and management program for the St. John River Basin as a case study.

The U.S. is developing simplified models and has undertaken related work in the Delaware drainage basin.

Belgium has set about making a mathematical model which will produce pollution analysis and measurement data, provide an indication of the sources of pollution and offer a definition of the measures required, while France is reported to be thinking about arranging a meeting next year to consider economic measures to improve water quality.

Marshall looks for big things from the new NATO role "because on its record NATO has better prospects of getting things done" than other international bodies.

"The NATO countries as a group — and by accident — have much in common, in that they are in the main industralized nations," he added.

An indication of the stress the Canadian government is putting on NATO's new role is the fact that at its fourth plenary session in Brussels last April, Environmental Affairs Minister Jack Davis was the only minister of cabinet rank to attend from alliance countries.

But while Marshall clearly is excited about NATO's new aspect he does not in any way belittle its military side.

★

Canada's forces have been reduced, an initiative that "was not received with any enthusiasm at all," according to Marshall, and by next January Canada's 5,000 remaining troops will no longer have a nuclear role.

The remaining Canadian forces are important, Marshall insists, because "there is a strange kind of moral and spiritual aspect to them."

"Canada is a small country without an axe to grind. Our professional soldiers — volunteers, not draftees — could be looked upon as a model by other nations, and it was felt we were here for altruistic purposes," he said.

And the basic fact of NATO is still military.

"A sense of security is needed to give people confidence," Marshall said, "so that they can then deal with the long-term solutions to political and other problems."

And international environmental control is clearly, in his mind, one of the big ones.

Pay Hikes for Council

Esquimalt's mayor and aldermen voted themselves a one-third salary increase Tuesday night, their first since 1968.

Mayor Art Young's annual salary has been boosted to $5,600 of which $1,850 is a tax-free expense allowance, and aldermanic pay has increased to $2,000 including an expense allowance of $650. The increases are retroactive to Jan. 1, 1971.

Previously the mayor had been paid $4,200 and aldermen received $1,500 annually. Before 1968 they were paid $3,600 and $1,200, respectively.

Young, who examined council salary structures in the province before recommending the Esquimalt increase, told council the new rates of pay are similar to salaries paid in other B.C. cities with populations from 10,000 to 19,000. Esquimalt's population is more than 14,000.

Ald. Kenneth Hill, the only council member to speak during committee consideration, said he has maintained a record of his own activities for the first six months of this year on municipal business.

He said he had attended 125 meetings during that period, and "I am personally fully convinced" the pay raise is in order.

It was passed unanimously.

DOG PATROL PAYS OFF

Esquimalt's dog patrol paid off this year, according to Muncipal Treasurer Peter Cairns. (See also Page 29.)

For a period of 17 working days between June 28 and July 17 student R. A. Ptolemy was hired by the municipality to collect fees for unlicensed dogs. Cairns told aldermen Tuesday night that during the canvass Ptolemy collected $630 in cash and issued 307 demand notices for dog licences.

Up to Aug. 31, Cairns reported, the canvass produced revenue of $2,786 for 409 licences.

That brought dog revenue for 1971 to $6,461 compared with $2,820 for all of 1970.

The municipality pays $8,200 annually to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals for collection and care of strays.

Cairns in his report to council said he estimates that 90 per cent of dogs in the municipality are now licensed and "it is my intention to set up a cardex system that will ensure that all dogs at present licensed will continue to be licensed in the future."

Esquimalt council also received and considered two letters from ratepayers on the subject of dog licences.

The first, from C. M. Seal, a veterinarian, protested the $7 fee for a male dog. Seal wrote that in other municipalities the fee is only $5 for "essentially the same service."

"Is the municipality of Esquimalt so hard done by for funds that they have to send an employee on a door-to-door campaign seeking funds for dog licences?" wrote M. F. Scattergood, 655 Genville. "I am utterly disgusted with this method of solicitation and am further appalled at the ridiculous fee charged, namely $14 for a female not spayed."

Both protesters purchased licences, council was told.

Esquimalt Revenue $1.7M

The municipality of Esquimalt collected $1,707,709 in revenue during the first seven months of this year out of a projected income of $2,197,000.

Treasurer Peter Cairns reported to Council that during the same period expenditures came to $1,014,215. These figures were included in an unaudited statement received and filed by aldermen at Tuesday's meeting.

He said $723,590 in property taxes has been collected, leaving an outstanding balance of $96,074. Other major sources of revenue include $325,000 in federal grants in lieu of taxes out of an estimated $406,000 for the year, and $175,732 in municipal grants from the province out of an estimated $395,400.

Major expenditures so far this year include $119,054 for police protection, out of $241,100 budgeted for 1971; $129,207 for public works of an annual estimate of $246,300; and $128,373 of the $210,000 year's estimate for social services.

Cairns told council that fines and court costs so far this year have totalled $12,938 in revenue for the municipality, down approximately $3,000 from the same period a year ago.

Sewage Switch

Esquimalt Municipal Engineer C. T. Warren reported to council Tuesday evening the municipality is now using the Capital Regional District sewer facility and the Macaulay Point outfall at two locations.

"Our sewage lift station in the Aral-Dellwood area of the panhandle is now discharging into the regional system at Shoreline pump station," he reported, "and we also have intercepted two outfalls at Lang Cove to discharge into the Naden pump station."

"This program of interception of existing outfalls will be continued in the year ahead with the intention of removing all sewage discharges from the immediate vicinity of the municipality and diverting those flows into the regional system," he reported.

Ald. Kenneth Hill, replying to a question from Mayor Art Young, said the Greater Victoria Health Board is already testing beach areas around Esquimalt with a view to removing the polluted beach warning signs which are now posted. Hill is a member of the health board.

Peterson Calls It Hogwash

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Tuesday described as "political hogwash" charges that a provincial government advertising campaign aimed at promoting traffic safety is actually a glorification of his own political image.

Peterson also said that results of the campaign cannot be measured on the basis of the Labor Day weekend traffic fatality figures which showed the record this year was worse than last year.

Results would be assessed on a long-term basis, he said, adding the aim of the multi-media campaign is to effect long-range improvement in driver attitudes and performance.

Peterson said motor vehicle department officials from other provinces had expressed interest in the B.C. campaign, and he would place more significance on those views than on charges of political opponents.

Peterson figured prominently in several of the advertisements, prompting some opponents, including Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) to accuse him of promoting his own political fortunes.

Silver Threads Open House Sunday

The public will join members of the Sidney branch of the Silver Threads Service Sunday at an open house from 5:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the new senior citizens' centre on Resthaven Drive.

Their former meeting-place at Sanscha Hall will be used for the last time Friday when branch members meet to play Jacko at 2 p.m.

Library to Stay Closed

Lack of public demand is responsible for the Greater Victoria Public Library remaining closed Sundays and holidays.

Library director Don Miller and library board chairman Col. Alf Hood said Tuesday there are no plans for Sunday openings in Victoria.

Recent plans by several Toronto boroughs allow for branch libraries to be open for a few hours Sunday afternoons. Reasons given are that Sunday is the only day many people are able to use public library facilities.

The main Toronto library opens three of its branches Sundays.

Miller said Tuesday there hasn't been a demand from the public for Sunday opening in Victoria.

"Opening on Sundays involves considerable expense," Miller said. "I'm sure that if there was the demand, the library board would consider it."

Miller said opening Sundays means employees must be paid overtime. "But if the public wants it and is willing to pay for it, we'd be happy to consider it," Miller said.

Hood, the library board chairman, said no consideration has been given the proposal of staying open Sundays.

"When you talk about that, you're going into economic aspects," he said. "To put on an extra shift would mean a fairly extensive expenditure."

Hood said the library's hours are flexible the way they are now and that the public is being served.

"There's not a great deal of traffic downtown on Sundays," he said. "We have to weighd the value of the service against the cost.

"I'm hesitant to plunge into Sunday openings unless there is proof there is a proper need for it."

We have some small frozen peas that are just the greatest you'll ever taste. They're selected with a thing called a tender-O-meter from young, sweet pods while the peas inside are only baby size. Then they are rushed to a nearby plant where they are flash frozen to retain all their goodness and flavour until you serve them to your family. You can't compare the price to assorted size peas (because obviously the farmer would get more pounds from mature peas) but then there is no comparison in tender-sweetness either. Treat your family this week to Woodward's supreme Small size frozen peas. A two pound bag is 63c on special this week

VSE Reinstates West Coast Securities

VANCOUVER (CP) — West Coast Securities Ltd. had its trading privileges reinstated by the Vancouver Stock Exchange Tuesday, almost four weeks after it was suspended for working capital problems related to transactions in shares of Freehold Gas and Oil Ltd.

West Coast president J. D. Thomas said, following the announcement by VSE president J. A. Van Luven, "We did not have to inject any new capital . . . we are well above the exchange requirements."

Thomas said his firm had provided for write-offs on margin accounts relating to two quite separate series of transactions but that neither by itself would have been sufficient to have caused West Coast's problems.

Meanwhile, Van Luven disclosed that the RCMP are being supplied with all information uncovered in the VSE investigation into the trading pattern of shares in the Calgary-based Freehold Gas and Oil Ltd.

"We are working with the Mounties," he said, "and we have provided them with everything we have.

"And there is a lot of it, as about 10,000 to 20,000 individual transactions are involved."

The RCMP had previously been called in to investigate Toronto-based Malone, Lynch Securities Ltd., whic went bankrupt last month in the wake of clearing problems relating to the same stock.

Asked whether the exchange was dealing with the Vancouver RCMP or those in Toronto, Van Luven said:

"Well, they come in and get the material. I presume they are working on it right across the country."

Spokesmen for the RCMP were not available for comment.

Freehold shares had been involved in extremely heavy and erratic trading on the Vancouver exchange from late July to mid-August, and the shares were twice suspended.

It is understood that Malone, Lynch had been placing orders on behalf of a client, and that several Vancouver borkers had executed the tranactions. Malone, Lynch's bankruptcy caused substantial lossed to several of the local firms.

One of them West Coast Securities, consequently suffered working capital problems and had its trading privileges suspended from Aug. 11 until they were reinstated Tuesday.

Bank Asset Values Triple in Decade

Canada's nine chartered banks have nearly tripled their total asset value since 1960, marking the group's greatest decade of growth since Confederation.

Canadian Bankers' Association reports the total at more than $50 billion ($50.08 billion June 30) compared with $16.9 billion at Dec. 31, 1960.

In the same period, the proporation of personal savings deposits to total deposits has risen from just over 60 per cent to 69.7 per cent, substantiating a trend toward greater savings effort by Canadians.

Total deposits amounted to $32.28 million in more than 22 million bank accounts. Demand deposits dropped from about 33 per cent to 24 per cent of total deposits.

Throughout 1970 an average 58,000 new personal savings accounts were opened each month, and according to the association, the use of cheques has expanded quickly.

Ten years ago the value of cheques cashed at the chartered banks was $302.74 million, compared with $818 million last year.

The banks finance more mortgage loans than any other private source, CBA reports, although business loans are the largest single component of the loans sector.

Total bank financing amounted to $31.09 million at Aug. 31, vs. $10 million at the end of 1960.

Of the group's shareholders, now numbering more than 171,000, 93.2 per cent are Canadian and they own 85 per cent of all the shares outstanding. About one in every 135 citizens owns stock in a Canadian bank.

Finally, at the branch level — there 6,540 of them — average deposits total $4.8 million, twice the level of 1961.

QUEBEC REPORT

Welcome Foreign Security Firms

MONTREAL (CP) — A committee set up by the Quebec government to study the Quebec securities industry recommends greater government intervention to ensure regular and orderly economic development in the province.

The committee headed by Louis-Philippe Bouchard, deputy minister of financial institutions, companies and co-operatives, made its interim report public today at a news conference. It said the final report should be completed before the end of the year.

The eight-member committee was set up in June, 1970, a month after the release of a study under the chairmanship of Trevor Moore of Toronto which delved into the question of foreign ownership in the Canadian securities industry.

The committee studied the same problem "but from a different standpoint," said Mr. Bouchard. "This is why it is logical that their recommendations should be different."

The Bouchard report favors measures to welcome to Quebec foreign securities firms from various parts of the world. The Moore recommendations favor steps to give Canadians control of securities firms operating in Canada.

PROTECT QUEBEC AIMS

However, the members of the Bouchard committee felt that foreign securities firms planning to settle in Quebec should not be allowed "unlimited access."

"We propose to accept the presence on the Quebec market of foreign firms, provided they respect the regional objectives of Quebec."

The report said the securities industry is going through rapid changes.

"The committee believes that the government should intervene more and more to ensure regular and orderly economic development, more particularly of the financial field which is the very basis of the growth sought for our province.

"The securities industry has a leading role to play in this matter. It is important that our financial institutions be conscious of this."

Because of Quebec's particular situation, the committee said, it is seeking easier means of access to various sources of capital.

"To this end, it appears necessary that all appropriate measures be taken for Montreal to become a major national and international financial centre, for Quebec securities firms to operate efficiently in this environment of international competition and ensure better services to Quebec investors and institutions."

ATTRACTS CAPITAL

It was necessary to reduce the dependency of Quebec on groups of non-Quebec firms and important "to provide our province with easier means of access to the various non-Quebec capital markets by giving a direct stake in Quebec's economy to foreign houses of various countries."

The committee also recommended:

—That the Quebec securities commission use its power to ensure greater competition in the securities industry;—That access to the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges be given to foreign firms under quotas and controls to be set out by the securities commission;

—That the methods of obtaining capital be enlarged by allowing securities firms to issue securities and shares.

New Arctic Pipeline Pact

CALGARY (CP) — One of North America's largest natural gas distributors, Pacific Lighting Corp. of Los Angeles, is pressing for a share of the Arctic islands gas supply.

A subsidiary, Pacific Lighting Gas Development Co., said today it had joined the Gas Arctic Systems Study Group which is investigating Arctic pipeline construction.

A week earlier, the parent company and five other petroleum firms reached an agreement on the sale of natural gas under 22.5 per cent of the leases on King Christian Island and at Drake Point on Melville Island.

FIRST CHANCE

Earlier in the year Panarctic Oils Ltd., which holds the remainder of the leases in the two areas and which had drilled successful wells, received $75 million from four U.S. companies in exchange for first chance in purchasing natural gas.

Any such purchases would be made only after the National Energy Board declared the gas surplus to Canadian needs.

Gas Arctic is conducting engineering, research and field surveys with the aim of building a 1,500-mile pipeline from the Arctic coast to connect with facilities in Alberta.

MEMBERS

From there, Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. which was the organizer of Gas Arctic would move the gas to southern markets.

Other members of the study group include Canadian National Railways, Columbia Gas System Inc., Northern Natural Gas Co. and Texas Eastern Transmission Corp.

Columbia, Northern Natural and Texas Eastern supplied half the money in the $75 million deal with Panarctic and Tenneco Oils and Minerals Ltd. put up the remainder.

Atlantic Meet Called

TORONTO (CP) — Senior noteholders of insolvent Atlantic Acceptance will meet here Sept. 17, 18 and 20 to vote on an arrangement for settlement of claims by other noteholders and creditors.

The meetings were ordered by the Supreme Court of Ontario.

If the arrangement is approved by three quarters of the noteholders, it will be binding on all creditors.

Senior noteholders would receive 100 cents on the dollar for the face amount of notes held, while unsecured creditors would get five cents on the dollar.

The settlement involves payment of $1.3 million to Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn., T. Eaton Life Assurance Co. and trustees of the Eaton Retirement Amnity Plan of Toronto.

Which Canadian banks belong in your portfolio?

Our new research report is off the press and available.

Investment Outlook for the Canadian Banks singles out the banks that we believe offer the greatest investment potential: the banks that deserve a second look from the serious investor.

We think Canadian banks can improve on the last twelve months' slow pace of profits. A better rate of earnings growth and an improvement in earnings multiples should mean a better market performance for bank stocks.

What's going to make the difference? Money—the raw material of the banking industry.

Right now the banks have money. And we believe that in today's developing economy they will be able to reduce liquidity, channelling more of their assets into higher yielding, more profitable loans.

In other words, we think the banks are going to make their money work harder.

They're going to lend it to the Canadian consumer who feels a lot more cheerful about the economy and wants to buy the big ticket goods and services he didn't dare think about last year.

They're going to lend it to the home buyer. Housing starts are up and housing needs mortgage financing.

They're going to lend it to business. From the major corporations to the one-man show; as business expands again so will the demand for loans.

We believe some banks are going to do better than others. And we have attempted to single out the ones that will profit most from the favourable trends that seem to be emerging in the industry's operating environment.

And this is where our new report can be of particular value to the investor who wants a Canadian bank or two in his portfolio.

If we're right, it won't mean we always spot the trends. Nobody does.

But we do have a staff of specialists constantly looking for new trends and studying the investment significance of each.

We figure that puts the odds in our favour.

Please send me, without cost or obligation, your new research report on the Canadian Banks.

If it was a lost weekend for the Victoria Dolphins, embryo members of the Big Four Junior Football League, coach Frank Hindle probably put it all in its proper perspective when he said:

"We have to raise our standards up to theirs."

"Our standards" and "theirs" were rather far apart on Monday when Dolphins met Vancouver Meralomas, kings of the Junior Football realm, and unbeaten in the last three years.

"Sure, we got hammered," Hindle admitted of the 61-7 Meraloma trouncing.

"I guess it was my fault," he added. "We all got up rather high after our first two wins, and no, I wouldn't say the players were disappointed as the result.

" 'Stunned' would be a better word."

Frank quickly shouldered the blame, however. "I may have neglected some of the coaching," he said. "Maybe we've been giving too much time to organization and not enough to the players."

"But I know it will all come — eventually," he added. "I should know. I lay awake most of the night thinking about it."

●

If the Dolphins took the visitors too lightly — "35 to something wouldn't have been too bad" — it still was to the coach's credit that when the game was out of sight, he went with his substitutes. And most of the players got into the lineup.

Not so the Meralomas. It wasn't in their game plan.

"They came to teach us a lesson," Frank agreed. "They came to put us in our place. And they did.

"They have a fine team," he added — "deep coaching, good passing, excellent receivers, and often our little defensive backs were at a disadvantage against the taller 'Lomas who were using their height to grab passes in a crowd."

"And they went with their first stringers mostly, too," he recalled.

And that has to add up to be a plus factor for the Dolphins. On two counts. First, it was nice to be so highly regarded; secondly the Meralomas were still doing it against the Dolphin substitutes.

But if Frank was mostly disappointed with the defence, several turnovers had to contribute to the sad story as well. "They had to hurt, especially the ones in our zone," he added.

●

Otherwise, Frank had no qualms about the future. He suggested that perhaps the Meralomas could be run against, especially on their left side; the short passing game should have worked better than it did; and if there was one cardinal sin, besides those turnovers, it was the decision to throw long too often. "And maybe we should have run more."

But all the guesses weren't wrong. And one move may have gotten the Dolphins in a new starting backfield.

"I sent Matt Flynn in twice with his own play," Frank admitted, "and he showed me a lot of shiftiness, and some good running." One of those Flynn moves, the Dolphins were third and one. Flynn rambled for 51 yards before he was hauled down. Hindle liked that.

But if the Dolphins got what "was coming to us," they came of age, too.

"It's a fairly rough league," Frank suggested of the physical beating that was being handed out — by both teams. If the Dolphins got the major message, put it down to experience, and the fact that the Meralomas outweighed them about 20-30 pounds a man.

And Frank has more news for the Dolphins, if they don't realize it already. This week's game here against the Cougars won't be one bit easier.

Don't take Frank's word for it. Take that of the Meraloma coach, "He told me," Frank said, "that he is more worried about the Cougars than anyone else."

A psych job on top of a beating?

"Perhaps," admitted Frank, "but I do know this:

"I have no problems on figuring out what to work on this week."

8-for-11 Spree Helps Cardinals To Sweep Pair

By The Associated Press

Joe Torre, the National League's top batter, is confident St. Louis Cardinals will overtake Pittsburgh Pirates in the East Division race.

"This club has a lot of pride . . . and remember, we've got five games left with the Pirates. The way we're going —who knows?"

Torre is the league's leading hitter with an average of .368 for the Cards, who have won nine of their last 12 games.

The Pirates hold a six-game lead over St. Louis, but both teams still have 19 games remaining.

Torre slammed eight hits in 11 at-bats Tuesday night as the Cardinals took a twi-night doubleheader from Philadelphia Phillies, 9-6 in 13 innings in the first game, 7-5 in 10 innings in the nightcap.

The opener was the completion of a game suspended from Aug. 1, picked up with the Cardinals leading 6-3 in the 12th.

HAD BIG NIGHT

Elsewhere, Houston Astros defeated Atlanta Braves 5-1, Montreal Expos romped to a 9-3 decision over New York Mets, San Diego Padres rallied to beat Cincinnati Reds 8-7 and Los Angeles Dodgers downed San Francisco Giants 9-3. Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh were not scheduled.

In the suspended game at Philadelphia, St. Louis led by three runs on resumption.

But the Phillies scored three runs on Larry Bowa's two-run triple and Pete Koegel's single, and it was a new ball game.

Then singles by Ted Simmons, Julian Javier, Bob Burda, Torre and Matty Alou produced three runs in the 13th, and the Cardinals had a 9-6 victory.

CARDS BLOW LEAD

In the second game, the Cards were trailing 5-3 with two out in the bottom of the ninth before Jim Beauchamp reached second when Denny Doyle got a late start on his pop fly, then dropped it for an error. Lou Brock followed with a two-run single to tie the game.

The Cards took the lead in the 10th when Torre singled and Simmons tripled.

Rusty Staub cracked his 15th home run of the season and drove in four runs as Montreal defeated New York 9-3. The Expos scored eight runs in the first three innings, then coasted home behind Steve Renko, 14-13, who got relief help from Mike Marshall in the ninth.

BLUE BEATEN

In the American League, the usually light-hitting California Angels jumped on flame-throwing Vida Blue of Oakland for three runs in the first inning and went on to defeat the Athletics 6-1.

It was Blue's fourth loss in his last five starts and his eighth of the season, keeping him tied with Mickey Lolich of Detroit Tigers for the most American League victories (23) and most complete games (24).

In other games, Kansas City Royals edged Milwaukee Brewers 4-3, Chicago White Sox topped Minnesota Twins 8-7, Baltimre Orioles beat Cleveland Indians 3-1, Detroit defeated Washington Senators 3-2 in 11 innings and Boston Red Sox routed New York Yankees 9-3.

Amos Otis put on an outstanding individual effort for the Royals, stealing five bases to equal a feat last performed on May 27, 1904, by Dennis McGann of the old New York Giants. It still fell one short of the American League record set in 1912 by Eddie Collins of Philadelphia Athletics.

Otis also collected four singles and beat the Brewers when he scratched a two-out single in the seventh inning.

PATTY-CAKING PLATE

Seemingly playing "patty-cake" with home plate are Montreal Expos' Rusty Staub (left) and New York Mets' catcher Jerry Grote. Staub won this round, patting plate first to score one of nine Montreal runs in Expos' 9-3 National League baseball victory.

Howe's Mind Made Up, Words Come Thursday

By The Associated Press

Gordie Howe apparently has decided to retire at the athletic old age of 43.

Howe, who has scored a record 786 National Hockey League goals in the last quarter-century with Detroit Red Wings, won't say definitely he is quitting.

He said in an interview Tuesday, however, that he had made a decision on his future and will make it public at a news conference Thursday.

"Nobody other than my immediate family knows what my decision is and I'm trying to be honest with everybody and not say in advance what it is," said Howe, who was hampered last season by an arthritic left wrist and right elbow.

Disclosure of Howe's imminent retirement as a player shared the spotlight Tuesday with the signing of high-scoring centre Phil Esposito by Boston Bruins to a four-year contract worth an estimated $400,000.

The 29-year-old Esposito, who scored a record 76 goals and 159 points last season, said he would not disclose the terms of the contract other than it called for "a good deal more than a speculative figure of $333,000."

Esposito said he was "very, very happy."

He added: "I never need any incentive to play hockey."

Neither did Howe in his prime. He was quoted recently as saying "hockey is no longer fun to play."

Esposito's contract is in conformity with U.S. President Nixon's wage freeze, a Bruin spokesman said.

"Maybe he didn't get an increase this year," the spokesman commented.

Esposito, who said at a news conference he's never had disagreement with Boston management since he came to the club in a trade several years ago, "got what I wanted—security."

His lawyer, Arnold Bloom, said: "Phil will have enough money to live on when he's through playing."

Although contract figures were not announced, Bloom said a report last week out of Toronto that Esposito would get $70,000 the first year, $80,000 the second year and $90,000 the third and fourth years was on the low side.

Asked if the long-term contract might take away any of his incentive, Esposito replied:

"Look at it this way, I'm coming off a three-year contract. The first year I scored 49 goals, the second 43 and last season I had 76.

"I give 150 per cent no matter what kind of contract I have."

With the NHL training camps scheduled to open this weekend and the first exhibition games slated Sept. 17, there were other developments in the sport Tuesday.

Pittsburgh Penguins purchased right winger Billy Hicke from California Golden Seals. The Seals also announced they had sold defenceman Doug Roberts to the new Boston Braves franchise in the American Hockey League.

Defencemen Jacques Laperriere and Guy Lapointe and forward Phil Roberto signed their contracts to play again for Montreal Canadiens.

The Montreal signings left only defencemen J. C. Tremblay and Terry Harper and forward Peter Mahovlich from their 1971 Stanley Cup championship team still without contracts for the coming season.

Coquitlam Avoids Early Elimination

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Coquitlam Adanacs stayed alive in the best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association final Tuesday night, defeating New Westminster Salonbellies, 10-7, before a crowd of 2,875.

The victory cut New Westminster's lead in the series to 3-2 with the sixth game Thursday night in Coquitlam.

Wayne Shuttleworth, winner of the regular season scoring title, and Kevin Parsons each scored twice for the Adanacs, who trailed, 0-3, in the first period, then scored nine straight goals.

Wayne Spooner scored twice for New Westminster, Runaway leaders of the WLA.

New Westminster was blanked in the second period by Dave Wedlock, who blocked 38 shots for the night. Joe Comeau stopped 34 for the Salmonbellies.

Registration At Esquimalt

Boys between the ages of seven and 20 interested in playing under the Esquimalt Minor Hockey Association will get their first of four chances to register tonight at the Jubilee Hall.

Tonight and Sept. 15, signing sessions will be between 6 and 8 p.m. with other registrations scheduled between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. Saturday and Sept. 18.

Season fees are $12 for pup division players, $15 for peewees and midgets as well as $18 for juveniles and junior "B" players.

Birth certificates must be produced at the time of registration and all prospective players must be accompanied by a parent or guardian.

HORSEMAN FACES FRAUD CHARGE

A Vancouver racehorse owner and trainer has been charged with fraud in the entering and running of a race horse at Sandown Park on Aug. 21.

Dave Baxter was charged Saturday in Sidney Provincial Court by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police with fraud by substitution of a horse in the seventh race at the Sandown track. He was released Monday on bail of $5,000.

He is scheduled to appear again in Sidney Provincial Court Sept. 13.

Baxter was listed in the official program as owner and trainer of Last Note, a maiden three-year-old bay filly which was recorded as finishing second behind Miss Jay Note, in the seventh race.

Last Note was entered and ran in the first race at Exhibition Park on Friday Aug. 20, the previous night.

Police declined to say which horse was substituted for Last Note, and secretary Bob Collis of the B.C. Racing Commission also declined comment "as the case is before the courts."

It has been reported that Baxter has since sold Last Note.

He owns and trains another three-year-old chestnut filly, Music Melody, which won her last start in Vancouver on Friday and paid $19.00.

It was Music Melody's third win of the season.

Collis declined to answer queries on how a horse which is supposedly examined for identification before a race could get to run in the race in question. "I can't talk about it," he said.

But he did admit: "Yes, horses were examined."

Race horses in B.C. are tattooed on the upper lip, and it is the duty of the paddock judge to check the equipment and identification of each horse in every race before it is run.

It is required that the tattooed number be checked off against a list by the paddock judge. This supposedly would rule out the possibility of any "ringer" being substituted in a race.

Last year, when the thoroughbred meeting was run here, Scotty Hughes, the paddock judge, in explaining the identification process, said in effect: "It can't happen. We have never had a ringer."

Presiding steward Gerry Millburn also declined to comment on the situation except to say "we have been aware of the charge."

It is not known when the last charge of substituting one horse for another occurred in B.C.

But there was a case in Seattle at the first running of the Longacres Mile.

A horse called Exoctude was substituted for one called Blue Boot. Exoctude was a class horse, and won easily.

Island Drag Champ Will Emerge Sunday

Driving champions and runners-up from each of four elimination brackets — competition, modified production, super-stock and stock — will burn through the quarter-mile Sunday to determine a single Vancouver Island points champion at Van-Isle Dragways.

Each of the eight drivers has collected points on the basis of class and eliminator bracket victories during the season.

Don Christianson of Victoria topped the competition bracket in his C-Gas dragster with 13 points while runner-up Ken Pearce, also of Victoria, has 11½ points in his E-Gas dragster.

Victoria pilots have also emerged high in two other brackers. Dennis Ireland collected 15½ points in his D-MP 55 Chevrolet to top the modified production lineup while Mel Butler, who drives a SS-C 1967 Ford, tied Russ Cooper of Duncan for super-tock honors at eight and one-half points. Cooper campaigns in a SS-GA '69 Mustang.

Alf Sawyer of Port Alberni captured stock eliminator laurels with a total of 15½ points from wins in his B-SA '64 Plymouth.

Greg Baxandal of Campbell River was runner-up to Ireland with 7½ points in his F-MP '57 Chevrolet.

The final spot, runner-up in the stock eliminator bracket, will be decided in a run-off between Rudy Veresh and Rick Spencer, both of Port Alberni, on Sunday. Both tied for the second-place position with four points each.

The eight qualifying drivers will meet in a final elimination series, handicapped under track records, to determine the Island points champion.

In addition to the special series, the usual program of drag racing will be held — beginning with time trials at 9 a.m.

Blues-Leaving Scotty Can't Shake Miseries

MONTREAL (CP) — The "blues" have followed Scotty Bowman ever since he left the St. Louis National Hockey League club as head coach.

"I've had a fair share of bad luck in 1971 so things have to get better," said the newly-appointed head coach of Montreal Canadiens after the latest incident.

"Guess what? I took a little trip last weekend and came home to find I had been robbed."

Thieves broke into his new home in suburban Dorval and walked away with about $4,500 worth of merchandise, "including five pretty valuable watches, a color television set and my wife's fur coat."

That was the fourth stroke of bad luck since he left St. Louis.

The day he sold his house in St. Louis it caught fire. On his way to Montreal, a short circuit in his trailer frightened his wife.

And on a recent trip, the same trailer almost backed down a mountain.

"My luck has to come around."

REGAN FIRES BROADSIDE — LACK OF RESPECT APPALLING

'Cry-Baby Professionals Creeping Into Sports'

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Larry Regan, manager-coach of the Lost Angeles Kings, Tuesday took a stinging swipe at "the cry-baby professionals who seem to be creeping into sports" and warned them to stay out of his corner of the National Hockey League.

"I am appalled by the lack of respect shown by some professional athletes," ssid Regan.

Regan's words also carried this veiled hint for the 41 professionals who are scheduled to report Saturday for the opening of the Kings' regular fall training camp at Memorial Arena: Get a haircut!

Part of the message went out to three amateur hopefuls among the 31 on hand for the Los Angeles "rookie camp, which opened here Monday. The three youngsters were asked to get their hair trimmed after showing up with near-shoulder length locks.

The three might have escaped the barber Tuesday but for Rico Petrocelli of the Boston Red Sox.

The veteran American League baseball player had been critical of Boston manager Eddie Kasko.

"I get upset when I hear of players who criticize their coaches," said Regan, who read of the Petrocelli-Kasko brush in weekend papers. "If this had been an isolated case, my three rookies probably wouldn't have been asked to visit the barber.

"But lack of respect is becoming far too commonplace today," said the 40-year-old Regan.

Earlier this year, he noted, Billy Conigliaro blamed Red Sox teammate Carl Yastrzemski for the firing of former Boston managers Johnny Pesky and Dick Williams.

Regan also recalled some of pitcher Denny McLain's "problems" while with Detroit Tigers, and remembers that halfback Duane Thomas, with Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League, called his coach, Tom Landry, "a plastic man."

"Respect," Regan continued, "starts with discipline. The Kings will have both . . . and there's a plane ticket, to home, in my office for any player who disagrees.

The appearance of a few pro athletes today is a disgrace. They are supposed to be highly-paid men, but you couldn't prove it by their looks.

"It annoys me, because these athletes are supposedly the idols of millions of youngsters.

"But the day the athlete begins to dictate to his coach, manager and owner, then the operation of sports, as we know it now, will be over.

"Players have a right to disagree with their coach. But any disagreement should be presented in the proper manner . . . by personal confrontation . . . and not through the press or radio.

"Fortunately, I haven't had that happen to me. Our players respect the Los Angeles organization. I'm proud of it, and we want our fans to be proud of it. One of the small ways we can maintain that pride is with neat appearance and good character.

"Cry-babies have no pride. Consequently, they are not respected themselves. Eventually, they are discovered for what they are, but it annoys me that sport must suffer in the interim."

Haircut, anyone?

'Strange War' Says Net Czar

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — "It looks as if they want a war — you'd have to be naive not to notice it," Lamar Hunt, millionaire bankroller of the pro tennis tour, says of the game's newest impasse.

"It's a strange war. They want to hurt us apparently. We don't want to hurt anybody. Our hope is to build a strong professional arm to the game.

"We think we can do it to the benefit of tennis, its sponsors and its fans."

The war involves Hunt's World Championship Tennis, Inc., which has 32 leading professionals under contract, and the International Lawn Tennis Federation, which has barred Hunt's pros in all ILTF tournaments, starting in 1972.

The ILTF tournaments include Wimbledon, the U.S. Open at Forest Hills, the French Open at Roland Garros in Paris, the Italian and Australian Opens, and other long-time, established fixtures.

Jack Kramer, former promoter, predicted Tuesday that one-man rule could destroy the game.

NO SIMPLE SOLUTION

"There is no simple solution to our differences, but these differences could be worked out," Hunt, a Texas oil heir who also owns the football Kansas City Chiefs and other sports teams, said.

"For one thing, we have suggested that the "Big Three" tournaments—Wimbledon, Forest Hills and Roland Garros—be included in the point system for our players. These players would be given reasonable expenses to play and would compete for the prize money.

"But, no, the ILTF says these tournaments are sacrosanct. They must be run on principles used in the past. Our feeling is that everything must be susceptible to change if it is to grow."

Defending champion Ken Rosewall, Rod Laver, Tony Roche and several other top pros declined to play in the U.S. Open at Forest Hills this year.

Arthur Misses Big Guns

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Arthur Ashe says he's as good as he was when he won the first U.S. open tennis championship in 1968, but the competition isn't because seven top players aren't here.

"In 1968 I played so well it scared me," said the third-seeded pro from Richmond, Va., after he defeated young Australian John Alexander 6-4, 7-6, 6-4, 6-3, to enter the quarter-finals.

He could win the $30,000 top prize in this $160,000 classic, which is missing such stars as defending champion Ken Rosewall, Roy Emerson, Fred Stolle, Tony Roche and Rod Laver of Australia, Andres Gimeno of Spain and Cliff Drysdale of South Africa.

IN HUNT'S STABLE

All of them, as well as Ashe, are members of Lamar Hunt's World Championship Tennis, Inc., stable. There was speculation that they bypassed Forest Hills because of a long-standing feud between the WCT and the U.S. Lawn-Tennis Association which has threatened to ban all contract pros as of Jan. 1, 1972.

"Forest Hills can't survive without us," Ashe said. "You can't hard-sell sophisticated New Yorkers, nor soft-sell them for that matter. They won't come out here to watch unknowns."

Ashe was the only seeded player to see action in the men's singles division Tuesday but four ranked women took to the courts.

SCORES UPSET

Nancy Richey Gunter, No. 7, of San Angelo, Tex., was upset by collegian Laura duPont of Charlotte, N.C., 0-6, 6-2, 6-4, in a third-round match postponed by rain Monday, while Kerry Melville, eliminated fellow Australian Judy Dalton 6-3, 7-5 in the first match of the Open between seeded players.

In a controversial centre court match, Joyce Williams of Britain was foiled by foot faults in her bid to upset No. 2 seed Rosemary Casals of San Francisco, losing 6-2, 2-6, 6-4.

Jan Kodes, the Czechoslovakian Davis Cup player who ousted top-seeded Australian John Newcombe in the first round, defeated Bob Lutz of Los Angeles 6-4, 6-2, 6-4; and Manuel Orantes of Spain eliminated Jim Osborne of Honolulu 2-6, 6-2, 36, 63.

Seven Return To Flin Flon

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — Flin Flon Bombers, Eastern Division champions last season in the Western Canada Hockey League, began a mammoth rebuilding job Tuesday, with 77 aspiring junior players at the opening of the team's 1971 training camp.

Manager-coach Pat Ginnell faces the coming season with only seven players returning from his 1970 team, — Blaine Stoughton, Dave Shardlow, Bob McKinstry, Rod Loynachan, Don Morrison, Gary Haverty and Herman Hordal.

All Three Champions In a Defensive Mood

All three 1970 winners will be back to try and retain their titles Friday in the 21st annual Vancouver Island Senior Ladies' Golf Association tournament at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club.

Kay Tribe of Uplands won the low gross award last year while two Royal Colwood entries, Linda McMaster and Helen Yoachim, won the low net and "grandmother" awards, respectively.

BRANTFORD TAKES LEAD IN ONTARIO

PETERBOROUGH, (CP) — Brantford Warriors moved to within one game of winning the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior A finals with a 19-13 win over Peterborough Lakers Tuesday night.

The win gives Brantford a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series with the sixth game in Brantford tonight.

Warriors won the fourth game, 14-7, Monday in Brantford.

Hawkins Clears Seven Feet But Places Second

BERLIN (CP) — John Hawkins of Courtenay became the first Canadian to clear more than seven feet in the high jump Tuesday as he broke his own Canadian record and finished second in an international track meet here.

Hawkins, 22-year-old physical education student at the University of British Columbia, jumped 2.17 metres — seven feet, 1½ inches — to break his old record of 2.12 metres — six feet, 11½ inches — set in 1970 at the British Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh.

Winner of the event, Istvan Major of Hungary, jumped the same distance as Hawkins.

Hawkins started high jumping seriously in May, 1970, when he switched from the conventional scissors style to the "Brill bend," a backwards style popularized by Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C.

TOPS DECATHLON MARK

Hawkins' new Canadian mark was the second national record broken by Canadian athlets during a current European tour. On Sunday at Cagliari, Sardinia, Gerry Moro of Vancouver broke his own decathlon record with a 7,326-point performance. His old mark had been 7,256.

Canada picked up three other second-place finishes here Tuesday.

Bruce Simpson of Toronto finished second in the pole vault with a jump of 16 feet, five inches, the same as that of winner Kjell Isaksson of Sweden.

Abby Hoffman of Toronto finished second in the women's 800 metres with a time of 2:02.8. Vera Nikolic of Yugoslavia won the event in 2:01. Penny May of Victoria finished second in the women's long jump with a leap of 19 feet, 11 inches. The event was won by Meta Antenen of Switzerland in 20-1¼. Brenda Eisler of Vancouver was third with 19-10¼.

Herve at 300, Going for 500

WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP)—Herve Filion, harness racing's leading driver, scored his 302nd victory of 1971 when he brought home Curragh Dan in the $7,000 pacing feature at Roosevelt Raceway Tuesday night.

In the afternoon, at the Freehold, N.J., Raceway, the Angers, Que., reinsman had won his 300th of the year with Royal Ross and his 301st with Julia's Champ.

Filion's goal is to drive 500 winners this year. He set a world record of 486 in 1970.

MONTREAL — Mixed reactions — angry outbursts and applause — greeted the appearance in Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday of the kidnap-slayers of Pierre Laporte, Paul Rose and Francis Simard have both appealed murder convictions in the Laporte strangulation. Their trials on charges of kidnapping were fixed for Oct. 18. Rose shouted "Long live the FLQ." Jacques Rose, whose murder trial date was set for Oct. 12, also spoke abusively.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — Ian Browning, 20, and Patricia McInerney, 19, both of Detroit, have a tall tale to tell — they survived a 145-foot fall into the Niagara Gorge. They suffered severe cuts and internal injuries Sunday but were reported in fair condition Tuesday.

HALIFAX — How is Attorney-General Leonard Pace of Nova Scotia going to get to work during the next seven days? He was stopped by the RCMP Monday for speeding and was fined $29. His driver's licence was suspended for seven days.

VAN NUYS — Actor Keefe Brasell, 47, got into trouble with a barroom brawl. He's been ordered to appear in court for a jury trial Nov. 8 on charges of assault with a deadly weapon. He is accused of shooting Richard B. Crawford in the chest. Braselle, a leading man of the 1940s, portrayed Eddie Cantor in The Cantor Story. He is free on $2,500 bail after he pleaded not guilty.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Al Marks Jr., chairman of the Miss America pageant, shouted through a bullhorn that a ban of hot pants was off. Now the girls may wear those "in good taste. You can wear whatever you want when you want." His announcement was almost redundant as 19 of 50 contestants were already hotly adorned. This relaxing of the rules meant hot pants could also be worn under slit evening gowns. Only on Saturday, when the final girl will be chosen to be Miss America did officials insist on formal evening gowns.

FLORENCE, Italy — The doors have slammed shut on an old love story. Amid legal wrangling the Case Guidi museum was closed where poets Robert and Elizabeth Barret Browning had lived. "I came here to save this house and I have fought this battle for 10 years," said Ruth Borchardt, near tears as a bailiff locked up her furniture in one room and evicted her from the museum for non-payment of rent.

Second Body Found

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The body of a second member of an Outward Bound program expedition has been found in the Three Sisters wilderness area of central Oregon.

The body of Lorene LaRhette, 17, of Sudbury, Mass., was discovered Tuesday near the spot where Mrs. Glen Howden, 21, of Fall Creek, Ore., died Thursday.

A third girl, Pam Sullivan, 18, of Seattle, survived.

Miss Sullivan told searchers Miss LaRhette had wandered away to look for help when the three were hit by a storm during an expedition concluding their course in the Outward Bound program of survival training.

William Richards, associate director of Outward Bound, said the program's trustees would appoint a board to review the case.

In Bend, Ore., the Deschutes County coroner confirmed that Mrs. Howden had died of exposure.

Dr. George McGeary, who suffered from the effects of performed an autopsy on the dead girl, said he believed Miss Sullivan may also have hypothermia, lowering of the body temperature.

Anglicans, RCs Reach Agreement

WINDSOR, England (Reuter)—Substantial agreement on the doctrine of the Eucharist has been announced by an Anglican-Roman Catholic commission which has been in private session here since Sept. 1.

A international commission of the two churches was set up three years ago by the Pope and the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Michael Ramsey, to prepare the way for organized unity.

An Anglican member, the Bishop of Ripon, Rt. Rev. John Moorman, described the announcement as "the most important statement since the Reformation."

The Eucharist covers the consecrated elements in the mass or holy communion service.

In their joint statement the 18 representatives of the commission said:

"We believe that we have reached substantial agreement on the doctrine of the Eucharist which is of vital importance to Anglicans and Roman Catholics."

Details of the agreement were not disclosed. It now will be submitted to the authorities of the respective churches.

The agreement is considered an important stage in the talks on unity. The commission likely will next concentrate on church ministry.

THE WEATHER

The current weather system is moving slowly eastward and should give rain to the lower mainland today. It will weaken as it moves inland and be accompanied by a band of showers as it crosses the Interior. A ridge of high pressure building inland on Thursday will give sunny skies to most areas. Cloud ahead of the next Pacific disturbance will reach the north coast in the evening.

Short and Sweet

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — A Canberra commuter operator has legally changed his name to the shortest in the world. In future Barry John Thomas, 19, will simply be known officially as Z. Not John Z. Or Barry Z. Just Z. Z has now applied for a passport as he wishes to go overseas.

Parking Problem

EDMONTON (CP) — Faculty and administrative staff at the University of Alberta have been asked to leave their cars at home to provide space for student parking.

Dave Biltek, Students' Union academic vice-president, made the request Tuesday as 19,000 students began returning to University for registration.

The administration earlier had asked the students to either leave their cars at home or register at the university for paid parking space.

Housing Starts

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Construction is expected to start within a week on the first part of a $1 million, 80-unit housing development to help ease this townsite's accommodation shortage, it was announced Tuesday.

Richard Muselle, a Banff motel owner heading the project, said 55 unites costing $700,000 will be constructed first.

Muselle says the suites will rent for $160 each, or $40 a month for each person.

Solicitor Resigns

CALGARY (CP) — City solicitors Jay Salmon and James Low, a senior civic lawyer, suspended Friday from their jobs, were reinstated Tuesday by City Council. But Salmon immediately announced he will resign.

The suspensions resulted from an inquiry by Angus MacDonald, an Edmonton lawyer, who said he found some dealings of the solicitors to be harmful "to the interests of the city of Calgary."

Animators Pursuing The Cartoon 'Gold'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The cartoon feature film, once a Disney preserve, is being pursued by a variety of animators who hope to harvest the same gold.

Ever since 1937, when Walt Disney made a huge hit with Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, other cartoon producers have tried to succeed with feature films. Nearly all failed. Somehow they lacked the Disney touch of combining imagination with artistry to provide an attraction which could be replayed over the years.

Charlie Brown of Peanuts fame broke the Disney monopoly.

Last year Cinema Centre Films, the CBS subsidiary, scored a hit with A Boy Named Charlie Brown. It cost $1 million and grossed $9 million.

"The success of Peanuts started a trend," says animation producer Fred Calvert.

NEED GOOD STORY

"But I hope the industry is not misled into thinking that animation is the only thing. You need to have a solid story and good characters, too."

Calvert Productions is making a cartoon feature of Don Quixote, based on a script by film writer John Paxton.

Cinema Centre will have another go at the Peanuts characters with Snoopy, Come Home.

Hanna-Barbara, veteran producers of television cartoons, have announced partnership with Saggitarius Productions for a feature based on E. B. White's modern classic, Charlotte's Web.

Animedia, which has specialized in educational and sales training films, has two features under way: The Hans Christian Andersen Story and Aesop.

Meanwhile Disney continues at its deliberate pace of turning out a feature every three years. Upcoming is Robin Hood, with the voices of Peter Ustinov, Brian Bedford, Phil Harris, Terry-Thomas and Andy Devine.

Trudeau Encounter Pleasant

OTTAWA (CP) — A casual encounter between Prime Minister Trudeau and about 100 demonstrating former Montreal mail truck drivers passed without incident today.

A spokesman for the prime minister said Mr. Trudeau was walking from his East Block office to attend a Liberal caucus meeting in the centre Block on Parliament Hill when he met the demonstrators.

The men, who drove postal trucks for G. Lapalme Inc. until that firm decided two years ago not to bid for renewal of its contract with the post office, have been demonstrating on Parliament Hill for more than a year.

In a previous encounter, Mr. Trudeau and the men hurled insults at one another.

But today's meeting was good-natured, demonstrators and a spokesman for Mr. Trudeau said.

They said the prime minister briefly discussed the background of the Lapalme drivers' case.

Spring Byington Dies at 72

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Spring Byington, veteran character actress who is best remembered for her five-year starring role in the December Bride television series, died Tuesday at her Hollywood Hills home after a brief illness. She was 72.

A native of Colorado Springs, Colo., Miss Byington began her acting career at the age of 14 when she joined a stock company in Denver.

Her long career included more than 30 plays and 75 movies, including Little Women, Mutiny on the Bounty and The Charge of the Light Brigade, and radio and television productions.

But her most remembered role was as Lily Ruskin, the often scatterbrained but wise mother-in-law in the December Bride, which ran from 1954-59.

The role, which won her an Emmy nomination in 1958, "elevated the stature of the meddling, stereotyped mother-in-law to that of family heroine," said one television critic.

Miss Byington is survived by two daughters, three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Industry Threatened

HOBART, Australia (Reuter) — Mercury pollution in Australian waters is threatening the oyster industry of Tasmania and could wipe out the entire Australian seafood industry in 10 to 15 years, an expert said Monday.

ITA Work Promoted

LONDON (CP) — A British foundation will receive about £50,000 ($125,000) a year toward popularizing the "initial teaching alphabet" under the will of Toronto millionaire Eugene Kelly.

A retired Coca Cola executive, Kelly left about $6 million, the investment income from which is to be divided between British and United States foundations promoting the proposed new alphabet.

It was invented by Sir James Pitman, publisher and educationist and grandson of the originator of the shorthand system bearing his name.

The ITA has 44 letters, the extra 18 designed to cover varying pronunciations of the same consonants and vowels. Its supporters claim that most children would considerably raise their standard of reading and rate of scholastic progress if they were to begin with it.

Made in Hong Kong Era Ends in Britain

LONDON (AP) — The tag Made in Hong Kong or Japan or any other country will disappear from goods sold in Britain after Nov. 30.

The government order has drawn angry protests from British manufacturers fearing competition from low-cost foreign producers.

After November, British shoppers will be unable to tell even if goods are British. The present regulations insisting that goods have their country of origin clearly displayed on them were introduced in 1926.

A department of trade and industry spokesman said the decision to abolish these regulations was taken in Parliament in 1968 under the previous Labor government.

Rats! Willard Movie 'Shoddy'

This crazy kid named Willard likes rats.

Not only does he like them, he keeps hundreds of the beasts in the basement of his mansion. He talks to them, and they squeak back.

He trains them. He takes some of them to the office where he works. He sleeps with them, feeds them and teaches them to kill people he doesn't like.

Willard is insane, a hopelessly incompotent young man harassed by a domineering mother and a coarse, cash-grubbing boss.

Daniel Mann's movie is supposed to be a horror story, but it's not that scary. It certainly carries none of the heart-stopping terror of Psycho, which it resembles in some ways.

Willard is filled with loving close-ups of bright whiskery rats. The sight of the horde in the basement or in the back seat of Willard's car is funny, not terrifying.

The plot is so bad, so unbelievably corny, it's funny too. Bruce Davidson as Willard is so obviously imitating Anthony Perkins' character from Psycho that he's not frightening either.

Ernest Borgnine as Willard's boss is a crass, ruthless man whose motto is do unto others before they do unto you.

Borgnine's a good actor, but it's impossible to take him seriously. His role is so stereotyped that it's unconvincing. A bit more genuine cruelty would have made him more disgusting than the phoney buck-hustling image of the movie.

Borgnine cheated Willard's father out of his share of the business. This wrecked Willard's mother's health. Nearly bedridden, she rides Willard to the brink of madness, ringing a bell by her bedside, demanding an account of his every move.

Mann cast her in the most grotesque manner as he did for all her friends. But again, the effect is comical, not oppressive.

Had Mann played the whole thing for laughs, his movie could have been a real gem. But he evidently wanted to make a shocker. He should have gone all the way and made a super shocker with rats scrambling everywhere.

Willard is a low-budget movie, but that's no reason it had to be as shoddy as it is.

Everyone loves to get terrifically frightened once in a while. It's fun. Willard has a perfect fright gimmick — those bloodthirsty rats.

Too bad they don't move into action until the movie's last half-hour.

Before the Judge

A woman who was charged with practising law while not a member of the law society pleaded not guilty Tuesday and was remanded by Judge William Ostler to Sept. 23 for trail.

Court was told that Margaret Leitch, 539 Phelps, carried on a business known as B.C. Stenographic Tax and Accounting Services at 918 Government.

The charge alleged she unlawfully practised law by drawing up documents "in respect of the incorporation of a corporate body in expectation of a fee . . ." The charge referred to the time from June 1, 1970, to July 31, 1970.

A Greek freighter captain charged under the federal oil pollution regulations was remanded to Sept. 23 for plea.

Alevisos Klaoudatos, skipper of the Orpheus, the charge alleged, committed an offence last July 14 when "a person or persons unknown" aboard the ship discharged an oil or oily mixture into Canadian waters.

The Orpheus, at the time, the charge alleges, was about 2.8 miles from Cape Lazo near Comox.

Robert John Brotherston, 55, of 1577 McRae, was fined $350 by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

He was also banned from driving for four months.

PGE Capital Increased

The allowable share capital of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway has been increased by $50 million to $210 million by the provincial cabinet.

The move would pave the way for future payment of provincial government money to the publicly owned railway. An act of the legislature is usually required for such payments.

The currently allowable $160 million limit is fully issued in the form of shares held by the provincial government. The last shares bought by the government were for $70 million worth in 1970.

Transport Minister Frank Richter said the increase in allowable capital takes into account the expansion of the railway and its future growth needs. He said it is likely some additional provincial investment would be made next year during the legislative session.

Critics of the government have described the payments as outright subsidies to the railway. They have challenged figures showing the PGE making a profit, on the grounds that the provincially-held shares do not earn a dividend.

Dief 'Comfortable' In Welsh Hospital

LONDON (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker was described as "comfortable" today in a hospital in Wales where he was brought Tuesday after being taken ill while holidaying.

"He is being investigated for an abdominal disorder and is likely to remain in hospital for a few days longer," said a bulletin from the Maelor General Hospital in Wrexham, Denbigh County.

The 75-year-old Diefenbaker, Canada's prime minister between 1957 and 1962, was expected to undergo tests later today.

His wife, Olive, was visiting him at the hospital today.

Text of the hospital's morning bulletin:

"The condition of Mr. John Diefenbaker, who was admitted yesterday, continues to be comfortable.

"Mr. Diefenbaker was taken ill while holidaying with friends in the Dolgellau area and the doctors thought it advisable for him to have hospital care and to rest for a few days.

"He is being investigated for an abdominal disorder and is likely to remain in hospital for a few days longer."

The old chief was taken ill while visiting his long-time friend Brig. Michael Wardell, a former British newspaper executive and former publisher of the Fredericton Gleaner, who now lives on a country estate at Dolgellau, Merionethshire, Wales.

MORE BLOODSHED FEARED AS TALKS ON IRELAND FAIL

LONDON (CP) — Results of a two-day meeting between the prime ministers of Britain and the Irish Republic have provoked bitter disappointment and growing fears of increased bloodshed in Ulster.

The discussions ended with Britain rebuffing a plan by Premier Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic for four-sided talks on solving the Northern Ireland problem.

Instead, the British government of Prime Minister Edward Heath proposed talks between Britain and representatives of all shades of opinion in Northern Ireland which would exclude the republic.

Heath's Conservative government hopes to meet members of the Northern Ireland government as well as representatives from opposition parties, the Roman Catholic Church and other minority groups.

But the British initiative appeared in jeopardy today. Some opposition spokesmen in Belfast, who have boycotted the Ulster Parliament since internment without trial was introduced for terrorists last month, indicated they will not attend the proposed meeting because of what they called unacceptable pre-conditions.

Home Secretary Reginald Maudling said earlier that anyone taking part in the discussions would have to agree that there could be no support for violence in Ulster and they would also have to discourage civil disobedience.

Both types of action are seen by many members of the Catholic minority as the only means of halting what they consider is a suppression of their rights by the Protestant majority.

Commentators today expressed fear that many of those in Northern Ireland who had hoped for some form of peaceful solution to the Ulster crisis now may turn to intensified violence as a method of solving their difficulties.

British newspapers were generally skeptical that the agreement between Heath and Lynch to continue consultations will produce any significant future agreement.

The newspaper says the meeting must be considered a failure from any point of view.

The Financial Times says: "The gap between London and Dublin yawns as wide as ever over the best method of solving the Ulster crisis."

U.S. Term for Launching Viet Attack Is 'Active Defence'

SAIGON (AP) — Despite President Nixon's declaration a month ago that United States forces in Vietnam are in defensive positions, they are actively engaged in two offensive operations in the northern quarter of the country.

The U.S. command does not acknowledge the term offensive in its military announcements these days.

"Active defence is what we're conducting," says Col. Phillip H. Stevens, a spokesman for Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam. "A passive defence is sitting and waiting for something to happen."

While U.S. offensive operations have been cut drastically in number and size, there have been instances where American forces have been sent in to bail out faltering South Vietnamese troops.

Such moves contradict the Nixon administration's and the U.S. command's contention that American forces are patrolling only to the degree of maintaining close-in security for U.S. bases.

One little publicized current operation is roughly 30 miles south of Da Nang in the Que Son and Hiep Duc valleys region, dominated for years by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

South Vietnamese forces were unable to secure the region, and a fresh North Vietnamese regiment was reported to have moved in. Some 700 U.S. troops in the Da Nang area were dispatched south to reoccupy two firebases that had been turned over to the South Vietnamese last April.

An armored cavalry unit from the U.S. Americal Division also was sent into the region and in the span of a few days lost eight men killed, a score wounded and several vehicles destroyed.

Several hundred troops from the 101st Airborne Division farther north have reoccupied at least two firebases to free South Vietnamese troops for a drive around the old Khe Sanh combat base in the northwestern corner of the country, near the Laotian border.

Russians Eye Man on Moon

HOUSTON (Reuter) — Recent Soviet space shots suggest the Russians may be preparing for their first manned mission to the moon—which could come after America's final lunar-landing trip in December next year.

This view was put forward by Dr. Charles Sheldon of the Library of Congress in Washington, but he added that the balance of evidence leaned towards a moon orbital flight only—with no lunar landing.

Sheldon is the foremost U.S. expert on the Soviet space program.

Russia's maiden moon mission might seem anti-climactic, coming some four years or more after the first American set foot on the moon. Sheldon sees it as part of an ambitious long-range plan to land cosmonauts on the planet Mars.

"A Russian manned landing on Mars could come as early as 1980," he said in a telephone interview Tuesday night.

"But I would say that some time around 1986 is more likely."

The U.S. has no plans at present for a manned landing on Mars, known as the red planet and currently the destination for one American and two Soviet unmanned probes.

Evidence that Russia is preparing for a manned moon shot to follow up its series of robot lunar missions comes from close examination of the performance of four unmanned Cosmos space vericles launched during the last 10 months.

Western experts say the last one—Cosmos 434, launched Aug. 12—tried out a throttle rocket much like the Apollo spacecraft's main engine.

The engine was several times more powerful than those aboard the Soyuz spacecraft which cosmonauts ride into earth orbit. Cosmos 434, like its apparent predecessors in the moon program — Cosmos 379 (Nov. 24), 382 (Dec. 2) and 398 (Feb. 26)—was launched into an initial earth orbit of 51 degrees inclination to the Equator.

This is the favored orbit for Soviet manned launchings and at least two of the vehicles then soared more than 8,000 miles into space.

U.S. Mars Probe Right on Target

HOUSTON, (Reuter) — The latest United States Mars shot, 100 days out in space, has overcome an electronic problem that threatened to exhaust its nitrogen supply before it completed its full one-year mission to the red planet.

Called Mariner IX, the windmill-shaped robot spaceship has covered more than 140 million miles of its voyage of discovery. On Nov. 13 it is due to become the first man-made object to orbit Mars.

But it may not be alone for long. Two giant Soviet spaceships, Mars II and Mars III, each weighing more than four tons compared with Mariner's 2,200 pounds, are bound for the same destination, and U.S. space agency scientists are betting that the Russian shots will land on Mars while Mariner is still observing it from several hundred miles away—a spectacular feat of space one-upmanship by the Russians.

However, the National Aeronautic and Space Administration, aware of the new era of Soviet-American co-operation in space, will seek information on the precise landing spots to help the Americans make some calculations of their own.

The single craft will map about 70 per cent of Mars surface with two television cameras, and radio the pictures back to earth together with data on the atmospheric and surface conditions.

NASA scientists studying data returned by previous Mariner spacecraft which flew by the planet have concluded that although its environment appears harsh, Mars could support some form of life.

Drs. Cyril Ponnamyeruza and Harold P. Klein said neither the thin Martian atmosphere nor the temperature range—85 degrees above zero to 122 degrees below — ruled out living organisms. Although there was little or no trace of surface water, it could exist beneath the surface in the form of permafrost or ice.

Viet Cong Defections 'Dropping Sharply'

SAIGON (Reuter) — The number of guerrillas defecting in South Vietnam has been dropping sharply but the Saigon government claims its efforts to entice them to give up their struggle is a resounding success.

It says that since the Chieu hoi (open arms) program started in 1963 a total of 185,761 guerrillas—including 2,000 North Vietnamese—have rallied to the government's side up to July of this year.

This was equivalent to the manpower of 22 Viet Cong main force divisions, a government spokesman said.

Their defection meant the saving of about 31,500 government soldiers lives, the estimated number that would have died if they had been forced to eliminate the defecting guerrillas on the battlefield.

But the program has not escaped criticism of allegations that the Chieu hoi ministry, which organizes the handling of defections, has been infiltrated by Viet Cong.

The minister in charge, Ho Van Cham, rejects such allegations as totally false.

CONCEDES POINT

He concedes that there are a lot of former Viet Cong working in his ministry but their loyalties now were beyond question.

Of the guerrillas who had rallied to the government side only about 100 had gone back to the Viet Cong, he maintains.

But there is no question that the number of defections has been dropping. From a peak in 1969—the year after the Communist Tet offensive—when 47,023 Viet Cong came over to the Saigon government, the number dropped to 32,661 last year.

In the first seven months of this year the figure barely reached 13,000.

Feuding Aussie Government Facing Grave Crisis

By VINCENT MATTHEWS

CANBERRA (CP) — The Liberal-Country Party coalition government which has ruled Australia for 22 years is facing its gravest crisis. Following a series of dismissals of government ministers, the whole facade of party unity which has been the strongest feature of the Liberals has cracked.

The climax to the inner-party feuding came with the dismissal by Prime Minister William McMahon of John Gorton, former prime minister and lately defence minister.

McMahon and Gorton have been enemies, even though in the same government and party, for years. When Gorton was prime minister, his party deputy was McMahon. The positions were reversed in March when McMahon became the leader.

With the two men incompatible in the same government, it was widely expected that McMahon would take the first opportunity to oust Gorton.

The opportunity came with the publication of a book by a political journalist Alan Reid called The Gorton Experiment, a highly prejudiced anti-Gorton record of the former Prime Minister's rule.

HIT BACK

Gorton hit back with a series of newspaper articles accusing former Cabinet colleagues of leaking secret government information and accusing Reid of being part of a plot engineered by newspaper magnate Sir Frank Packer, a close friend of McMahon, to "get Gorton."

McMahon interpreted this as a breach of cabinet loyalty and integrity—and asked Gorton to resign as defence minister.

The dismissal opened up deep divisions within the Liberal Party. Former foreign minister Leslie Bury—himself dismissed a week earlier—and two previously dismissed ministers, Thomas Hughes and Denis Killen, all came out with public statements supporting Gorton.

When Parliament met, the opposition Labor Party moved a virtual censure motion against Prime Minister McMahon. Although it would have taken only four government MPS to vote with the opposition to bring the government down, they stayed put—and McMahon was saved.

While there is wide dissatisfaction within the Liberal Party, the fear of a Labor Government still keeps the dissidents from going over the edge of revolt.

IN DILEMMA

Although the next federal election is not due until October of next year, McMahon himself had been putting out hints at the possibility of an early poll.

He wanted to obtain a mandate in his own right to give him more authority in his government. But with the widespread bad publicity of past weeks, the chances of an early election have receded.

Yet McMahon is himself in a dilemma. The American dollar crisis has tended to increase Australia's own economic problems with an inflation trend that is beginning to get out of hand.

The budget brought down recently by Treasurer Billy Sneddon increased income taxes but did little or nothing to cope with the inflation problem.

The government's main line of attack is going to be against the militant trade union movement which, government spokesmen claim, has been primarily responsible for the inflation by demanding and getting big wage rises because there is a shortage of labor and employers have been "blackmailed" by strike threats.

But, with taxes going up and post office charges rising along with general price increases across the board, it will be difficult for the government to persuade the trade union movement to go easy on wage demands.

On top of this is one of the gravest economic recessions the rural areas of Australia have ever known. Some graziers in outback areas are walking off their properties because they cannot earn a living with the slump in wool prices.

The Government has been pumping millions of dollars in subsidies for the farmers but there is no sign of improvement in their position.

Yesterday's Paper For Today's News

By LOUISE COOK

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of Americans are reading today's news on yesterday's newspaper because of environmental concern that has led to increasing use of recycled newsprint.

The American Paper Institute estimates that of all the newspapers printed in the United States in 1969, 23 per cent were recycled; that is, collected and reprocessed into new paper.

Industry, conservation groups, legislators and others have combined to aid in the recycling drive.

In Madison, Wis., for example, the institute and city officials joined to ask residents to separate newspapers from other refuse. As a result about 40 per cent of the collectable newspapers are being recycled, says the institute.

Irvington, N.J., passed a law requiring that householders put their newspapers out separately once a month. Charities pick up the paper and sell it to a recycling company.

PAPERS SOLD

San Diego, Calif., residents are encouraged to put their newspapers into one of 200 boxes set out by the Kiwanis Club. The city picks up the papers and sells them. The Kiwanis Club gets $5 for every full box and the city salvage operation gets $8.

The institute estimates that groups which collect and sort old paper make about $25 million annually. In addition, taxpayers save $25 in the cost of refuse disposal for every ton of paper that is collected.

The most important product made from recycled waste paper of all kinds is combination paperboard. The API estimated 70 per cent of recycled paper is used in this form. Next comes newsprint and then a variety of other products including cartons, posters and book covers.

How much recycled newsprint can be used?

The Garden State Paper Co., the major producer of recycled newsprint, estimated a maximum of 40 per cent.

NOT PRACTICAL

Richard B. Scudder, chairman of Garden State, said, however, such penetration is impractical from a sales standpoint.

"Of the over nine million tons of newsprint used annually in the United States, two million tons are made by mills that are owned by newspapers," he said. "Newspapers have long and continuing contracts with their suppliers, and short of government pressure, which I don't foresee, I think a 10- or 12-per-cent penetration of the market is about what this form of re-use might be expected to attain."

Scudder said close to 200 papers in 27 states use recycled newsprint, including the Chicago Sun-Times, the New York Post, the Los Angeles Times and the Washington Post.

How does recycled newsprint compare with regular newsprint?

Irwin Jaffe, director of the testing laboratory of the American Newspaper Publishers Association Research Institute, said that on the basis of initial tests "basically you could say it's the same quality."

SLIGHT DIFFERENCES

Jaffe said the recycled paper is "pretty much the same color" as regular newsprint. He said there were only slight differences in other qualities such as opacity, strength and texture.

Jaffe added, however, it was still impossible to determine how newsprint recycled more than once would stand up. "We have no knowledge of how many times it can be recycled," he said.

A spokesman for the Richmond Newspapers, publisher of the morning Times Dispatch and evening News Leader, said these papers had been using recycled newsprint since last fall. These newspapers are in the same corporate organization as Garden State.

"We are quite pleased," he said. "The strength is excellent. The opacity is good. The break record is good. It's equivalent to virtually any Canadian paper."

The spokesman said the combined press run of the morning and afternoon papers was 270,000, printed by letterpress.

He said recycled newsprint costs about $7 a ton less than new paper, which now costs $168 a ton delivered in New York and $163 a ton west of the Rocky Mountains.

QUICK, ECONOMICAL, DELICIOUS.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

UP A TREE and enjoying every lofty moment are Drinkwater Elementary pupils at Duncan. Photographer Donna Clements spotted them on Sherman Road not long after their abbreviated first morning of school Tuesday. Today they're back down to earth with a thud and spending the whole day in school.

No Blame In Death Of Girl

DUNCAN — After hearing Tuesday night that an 11-year-old Duncan girl was killed by a rock thrown by a boy, a coroner's jury ruled that no-one was to blame for her death July 4.

The accident occurred at a railroad trestle about six miles west of Shawnigan Lake at the Koksilah River.

The jury was told a rock thrown by a 12-year-old Duncan boy from the top of the 156-foot-high trestle killed Nolleka Charlene Novis, of Allenby Road, Duncan.

Dr. O. C. L. Gloster said the girl died of multiple head injuries.

SAW ROCK DROP

The girl's father, William Novis, said he was about to take some movie picture of his daughter and his son, George, 8, at the base of the trestle near the river when he saw the rock drop.

One of the party of adults and children, Patricia Netley of Duncan, testified she had been sitting at one end of the trestle when she saw a boy carrying something. She heard him call out and then learned someone below had been struck.

The boy said he wanted to throw the rock into the water below. He had looked down but could not see anyone and shouted before he threw the rock.

Schreyer Will Fire Maverick Ministers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer placed a stern hand on the reins of his cabinet Tuesday, reprimanding Highways Minister Joe Borowski for his personal attack on abortion and threatening expulsion for those guilty of intolerance and public insubordination.

Mr. Schreyer said in his strongest-yet statement of authority: "I do not readily accept — I will not accept — a course of action to be followed by one of my ministers which calls into question the rights, sincerity and conviction of a person who holds an opinion which is markedly different."

A statement has been sent to ministers warning that public policy disagreements will no longer be tolerated.

"Anyone who can't abide by it," said Mr. Schreyer, "I expect they will resign."

The premier spoke to a delegation of 25 patients of Winnipeg's Mount Carmel Clinic who were demanding an apology for remarks by Mr. Borowski about the clinic and its director, Anne Ross.

Mr. Borowski criticized the clinic for referring patients to New York for therapeutic abortions, legal there on demand, and the United Way of Greater Winnipeg and the provincial government for supporting the clinic financially.

ISSUED MEMO

He later issued a memorandum to employees of his department urging them to withhold United Way contributions after both cabinet and United Way rejected his argument for cutting funds.

Mr. Schreyer said he is "willing to accept a far greater degree of expression of personal opinion from cabinet ministers" than is traditional, "but we will not accept such expression of personal view that is in itself intolerant."

Mr. Borowski's memo, he said, contradicts government policy and "is herewith countermanded . . . voided."

Mr. Schreyer said his colleagues "feel Mount Carmel Clinic and the United Way are worth continued and increased support."

He described the clinic, which receives about $45,000 yearly from the province and $50,000 from the United Way, as a "classical charity service to those people who cannot afford the services they require."

Mr. Borowski said in an interview he will not retract his statements or memo.

"There is nothing in the world to prevent them (the cabinet) from firing me," he said.

Regular Tires Just as Good Near Zero

OTTAWA (CP) — Studded tires, tire chains and sand give drivers practically no more protection than regular tires at temperatures near zero degree Fahrenheit, the Canadian Safety Council said today.

In a report on winter driving tests conducted early this year, the council said the three traction aids help drivers at temperatures near freezing—32 degrees Fahrenheit.

But when temperatures dropped to zero and below, most of the advantages were nullified.

Tests were carried out last winter on Lake Timiskaming, about 300 miles north of Toronto, by the council, the federal and Ontario transport departments and the Quebec roads department.

Vehicles equipped with standard highway tires, snow tires, studded snow tires and tire chains were tested on clear ice and sanded ice for stopping distances and the ability to manoeuvre at different temperatures

Sanded ice reduced stopping distances of all vehicles, but even the increased friction provided by sand "became insignificant when applied to ice hardened by a drop in temperature to 10 degrees."

"On clear ice at temperatures near the freezing point, tire chains and studded snow tires fitted on all four wheels provided the most significant decrease in stopping distances in comparison to standard highway tires or snow tires.

"But once again, the improvement was nullified as the ice temperatures approached zero."

LONGER TO STOP

Snow tires had little effect on stopping distances on clear ice, the report says. Vehicles with snow tires "actually took longer to stop than those equipped with regular tires on clear ice at temperatures near the freezing point."

Cornering ability was improved with studded tires at higher temperatures, but the advantage disappeared in colder weather.

Another test designed to determine starting traction on hard-packed snow showed that snow tires gave no advantage compared to regular tires.

"Chains gave the most bite but studded tires gave no consistent advantage on this treacherous driving surface compared to the same snow tires unstudded."

Nixon To Push Tax Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon is setting out immediately and in person to campaign in Congress for approval of the tax cuts built into his new economic policy.

Congress reconvened today to deal with business left behind for a month's recess, and to begin work on the new economic package.

The president arranged to appear before a joint session of House of Representatives and Senate at 12:30 p.m. EDT Thursday to urge approval of his plan to combat inflation and unemployment. The address will be carried live on radio and television.

The first session of the 92nd Congress was faced with a substantial workload even before Nixon recommended a series of tax measures on Aug. 15, when he announced his 90-day freeze on wages and prices.

Now the economic package, and the response of Democrats who control Congress, is sure to be a dominant issue in the balance of a session likely to run into hot water.

STARTS HEARINGS

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally was the first witness as the House ways and means committee opened hearings on the Nixon program, which includes a 10-per-cent business investment tax credit, repeal of the seven-per-cent business investment tax credit, repeal of the seven-per-cent excise tax on new automobiles, and a speedup to Jan. 1, 1972, for a $50 increase in personal income-tax exemptions.

Democrats in both Senate and House are sure to work some changes in the tax proposals before a bill is passed.

Representative Wilber D. Mills of Arkansas, chairman of the ways and means committee, may seek revisions to offer more tax relief to lower-income Americans.

SCHOOL'S IN

A Day of Parting For Every Child

Judy was the tom-boy, a climber of trees, outgoing, effervescent, in love with the world and the people in it. We had never seen her so grave, so withdrawn as she appeared that morning. It was somehow as if her spirit had been bruised. It was like caging a wild bird . . .

Jill was the shy one, a silent, unobtrusive observer of life. That morning held no terrors for her. She seemed to have grown three inches overnight, to have acquired an instant poise. She brought home each bit of knowledge as if it was a gold nugget . . .

Jenny, too, was the outdoors girl, affronted by the very idea of spending the best part of a day in a classroom. Almost as a bribe, her mother had promised to buy her a wristwatch on that first day. They were to go into town in the afternoon for the purchase, but when Jenny came home she had an announcement. "I won't need the watch," she said, "'cause I'm not going back . . ."

★ ★ ★

Was it curiosity, journalistic research or, as I strongly suspect, just pure masochism?

Whatever it was I felt a compulsion to pull in behind the long line of parked cars at the Colwood Elementary School Tuesday morning to watch that most emotional of all the suburban adventures: the day the kids go back to school. There can be nothing, surely, more timeless than the spectacle of six-year-old children stiff in their new clothes, and, you'd swear, just a little bit drunk, beginning that crucial chapter in their lives. Now, purely as a spectator, but feeling a remarkable empathy with child and parent alike, I tried to analyze what was going on in their minds.

Part of it, of course, is that tug of feeling that we associate with the agony of parting. It is all very well to say that they'll be home this afternoon, but the day that school begins is always an immutable point of departure, a fork in the road. They will be home in the afternoon, sure, but the separation has been made.

You watch them walk away from the car not turning back for the wave of farewell that you usually get, and they are swallowed in the seething crush of other people's children. Suddenly the summer has paled to autumn and time registers consciously, as they used to suggest it in old movies by the pages of calendars fluttering and blowing away.

A man, a young neighbor, enduring for the first time an experience that I had felt in three autumns of time past, watched a small girl moving out of his protective shadow and then, seeing me watching, leaned from his car window and shouted, "Now maybe we'll have some peace in the house." His heart wasn't in it. Between us, unspoken, there was a bond of melancholy, the sweet sorrow of loss.

I suppose, too, that we react because of a strong sense of identity, vividly remembering the inner turmoil, the first real call for courage, that the day brings to every child.

I could taste it yesterday morning. All the old dread and expectation, the feeling of being in the grip of a current, swift beyond your control, that would sweep you to all manner of terrifying or delightful places. In a changing world it seems a changeless experience, the very first confrontation with the unknown.

If ordinary lives may be divided, as history is divided, into eras, it is the beginnings that are the most memorable.

★ ★ ★

Test your memory. Consider those examples of total recall in autobiographies. Most often they record moments of anticipation, of the fresh start, the cross-roads that are arrived at — the first job, the marriage day, the move to a new city — that cause us to pause and think, with equal parts of foreboding and resolve, of what the future holds.

That, I suppose, is the drama of the start of a school year, not only for those who are beginning, but for those of us who remember it as the overture to a new time in our lives.

The props that go with it play their part and they, too, are changeless. The new scribblers as unsullied as the Himalayan snows. The texts with their crisp, clean edges and the smell of newness. The unsharpened pencils. The small white jar of paste and the brush, those shining tools of education that are perhaps the most exciting of all the hardware we'll ever use in our lives. Put a new scribbler to your nose and you'll catch the fragrance of that day in your own life.

For the father or for the mother it is a tremulous experience, not merely because of memory, but because of the seeming vulnerability of their children. You learn, of course. They are quick to adjust. They are — God knows, the summer proves it — all but indestructible. Still, until the very day they leave forever (and even after that) we cling to the idea that we must stand between them and the challenges they must face.

If we magnify the challenges, if we diminish their capabilities, it is only the natural thing to do, seeing in them our own image.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE on the View Royal farm of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Hourigan at 23 Helmcken this morning resulted in the total loss of barn, 20 tons of hay, seven saddles and other gear. Deputy fire chief Frank Bell said cause of the fire has yet to be determined and estimate of loss could be between $5,000 and $6,000. (Alex Wotherspoon photo.)

Loan Gets Foster Home Plan Out of the 'Theory Stage'

A federal agency loan of $17,391 will help to build a new foster home in Victoria.

The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation loan will give the Victoria Churches' Group Homes Association more than half the funds required to acquire and renovate a home designated primarily for Indian children.

"The church group was formed last February from all mainstream Victoria churches," said Canon Hilary Butler, an Anglican who serves as group director. "This is our first project and it appears now we have enough funds in hand to get out of the theory stage."

Canon Butler, program director for the diocese of British Columbia, said he prefers not to give the address of the home for fear that publicity might lead to social problems for the children involved.

Accommodation will be provided for six children, with church officials hoping the home will be ready in about eight weeks. Minor alterations have to be made and a married couple has yet to be found to act as foster parents.

Probe Sought On Dry Wells

Central Saanich council Tuesday requested an immediate investigation into why a number of wells have dried up.

The municipality has asked the investigation be conducted by the provincial department of lands, forests and water resources.

Some of the residents have laid the blame on a well drilled nearby by commercial bulb farmer Geoff Vantreight. He was unavailable for comment.

On Aug. 31 seven residents, headed by W. H. Hopper, 8231 East Saanich and E. A. Lyon, 8176 East Saanich, wrote to the provincial department urging a survey.

In a copy of the letter read at council, Hopper said his well ran dry July 16, two weeks after cement was poured at Vantreight's 570-foot well. The new well pumps water at the rate of 200 gallons per minute, says Hopper.

Since Hopper's problem two other wells have dried up and others in the area are unusually low.

In the letter the residents said they are concerned about their future supply of water, but there has been no reaction from the provincial department.

Ald. Ted Clayards said the department should be castigated for lack of action, adding the government should "at least put a stop to the pumping."

Mayor A. M. Galbraith agreed the matter is of major concern and said every effort must be made to come up with the technical answers.

Hopper told council he did not want to condemn Vantreight, indicating his well might not be the source of the problem.

"But we should seek provincial help to find out," he said.

PLASTIC GRASS may be tough and hard wearing but, unlike the real thing, it doesn't always stay the same size. The 5,000 square feet of artificial turf laid on three traffic islands at Carey and Douglas by the provincial highways department is starting to shrink and curl at the edges. The instant turf has been termed "hideous" by local environmental groups. Service station attendant Barry Beischer demonstrates.

CENTRAL SAANICH EXPECTATIONS:

Similar Tax Relief as Victoria?

Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith hopes his municipality will obtain relief from property tax increases for senior citizens on fixed incomes, as Victoria was promised.

He is optimistic the provincial government will grant him the same relief as it promised to Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Under Haddock's scheme taxpayers 65 years and more, living in single family dwellings, would be able to defer paying increases in taxes above the 1970 levy until their property is sold or their estate closed after death.

MOST INTERESTED

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has said he will seek an amendment to the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act so Victoria can proceed with the scheme.

Galbraith said in an interview today his council has been working on similar lines, and has made two submissions to the minister.

"I have discussed the matter with Mr. Campbell and he said he is most interested in the approach we are using and will try to co-operate with us in any way he can."

Galbraith said although he hadn't studied Haddock's plan in detail, the Victoria proposals were different in some ways from those submitted by Central Saanich.

Instead of making the scheme open to anyone 65 and older, he said, the municipality was proposing it apply to persons who qualify for full government subsidies on their B.C. Medical Plan premiums.

DEFER PAYMENTS

"We feel anyone at this level should be able to defer their tax increase payments," he said.

Another difference was that, unlike the 8 per cent interest proposed by Haddock, the municipality was thinking in terms of only "nominal" interest.

Galbraith said: "It would be at prime lending rate — in other words the lowest rate we could possibly set."

He estimated that only about 20 persons in Central Saanich would really need the tax relief plan, and that hence the general tax structure would not be affected.

No 'Action' For Curtis--Yet

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis today squashed rumors that he has joined Action Canada, Paul Hellyer's new political pressure movement.

However, Curtis said in an interview he is "carrying an application form" for membership in the movement, adding: "But I haven't decided yet whether I shall do anything about it."

He said he was interested in the organization's aims after attending Action Canada's first meeting in Victoria last month.

"If I do join it will be as a private individual," he said.

Asked whether such a move might be made with a view to standing as a possible candidate for the movement in future federal elections, Curtis said: "I am keeping my options open but I have no intention of offering myself as a candidate for the next federal election."

The Saanich mayor was among 400 who packed the Empress Hotel last month to hear Hellyer explain that Action Canada's aim was to "get Canada back on the rails again" through a three-point program of lower taxes, lower interest rates and mandatory wage and price guidelines.

HOLDING OWN

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird was reported still in critical condition in Seattle's Harborview Hospital this morning.

Baird, 65, suffered a heart attack during a game of lawn bowling Friday.

Doctors said he was conscious and "holding his own."

Haddock Back But Pacing Self

Mayor Courtney Haddock made his first trip to city hall Tuesday since his July 13 heart attack.

He said, however, his return to full duties will be gradual.

"The big job right now is to pace myself," Haddock said in an interview.

He said he has not received from his doctor results of cardiac tests taken Tuesday which may show he is healthy enough to return to duties at city hall. He was unable to say if he will attend Thursday's council meeting.

Ald. Percy Frampton is acting mayor for the month of September and if Haddock is still at home Thursday, Frampton will chair council's meeting.

WHEN AN AUGUST BUSH fire was threatening the Indian community of Rae, Chief Alexis Arrowmaker made his decision and gave his orders. The old people would launch the canoes and hold them inshore, ready for evacuation. The able-bodied would fight to save their town.

Showers and a veering wind averted the emergency. When we put in at Rae, 70 miles west of Yellowknife at the end of a sideroad, the canoes rested bottom up on the banks of their narrow inlet.

Houses looked out to Great Slave Lake from the shield-rock slopes above. Behind some of them rose tepees, their sides sheathed in canvas or boughs. The teepees aren't to live in. They provide storage space for gear, also for frozen fish and wild meat in winter. We saw the toboggan-like dog sleds of the sub-Arctic, and the moose dogs of mixed breed that will haul them tirelessly when the lakes freeze and the snow descends on the bush.

The dogs were no longer free to roam as once they'd been. Each was tethered to a stake, and every team had its square corral of new-peeled poles.

Arrowmaker decreed the dog roundup when he became Rae's first non-hereditary chief early this summer. He was obeyed with a minimum of backchat by the Indians who elected him.

A tough-minded and powerful leader, he is determined that his people shall function effectively in both white world and red. When he speaks to the territorial council, which he does with blunt forcefulness, it is in Dogrib through an interpreter.

A white man seeks government approval for a liquor outlet in Rae. No, says Chief Arrowmaker, his people don't want it. He is listened to attentively and with respect.

In the blending of old and new that goes on in the north, Rae has become Rae-Edzo. Rae is the old town; Edzo, a few miles distant, is the site of a new school financed by federal grant. It is staffed by Indian and white teachers. The boys and girls to whom it opens its doors this fall will be instructed in the skills of both worlds.

They will study their own history as well as the white man's. A knowledge of mathematics will not out-rate the ability to tan a hide or set a fish-net.

I have lingered on Rae-Edzo because it seems to me as an interested southerner that red power and white may be working in concert there toward useful ends.

But the time for lingering was past. Our holiday down north was well along. We had better be heading south for home and a garden in which the blackberries would be ripe, and the tomatoes grown large on their vines.

Fall had already kindled the little birch trees around Yellowknife to red and gold when we set out along a Mackenzie Highway that now had landmarks for us.

We knew the look of its clean campsites, each with a screened shelter housing tables and an enormous stove. Those stoves, we'd been told, could be life savers for stranded travellers on the winter road when temperatures dropped far below zero.

There were waterfalls on strong rivers that we'd like to glimpse again. Perhaps in the Sixtieth Parallel border station with its flags and pelts and coffee free for the pouring, we could pick up a white-on-blue Northwest Territories polar bear sticker for our car . . .

We broke our run to the border at Fort Providence that evening. The town follows the north bank of the Mackenzie River by a road that passes from the smartly new of motel, cocktail lounge and school to the old of the Catholic church and pioneer nursing station on its outskirts.

Beyond are grasslands. The broad Mackenzie flows sedately below the cutbanks toward its distant Arctic delta. Back in the town, the sled dogs of the north were howling.

Next morning at Dory Point, the ferryboat Johnny Berens snubbed its nose against the bank and held there with diesels shoving. We crossed the big river and loafed our way, stage by stage, south to Victoria.

It was a good trip.

If it cost us a tire and a tie-rod, it gave us much to consider and remember.

I hope that some year we will see the harsh and splendid land above the provinces again.

Dog Shops for Family After Little Training

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Ares is an eight-year-old dog, mostly German shepherd, who has been doing his family's grocery shopping for two years.

His owner, Wolfgagn Guier, said it took the dog about two weeks to master the job.

"You can do it with almost any dog, provided you know him and there is communication between the two of you.

"We send him out on the average of every second day and the people at the store don't mind. When the store changed hands this year I asked if Ares could carry on. They said it was fine, provided he didn't bite. Well, he hasn't bitten anyone yet."

Guier said the idea is not a new one in his family.

"When I was a little boy in Germany I was told about my grandfather who shared a similar setup with his German shepherd."

John Lewis, a clerk at Pal's confectionery, said it gave him a turn the first time he saw Ares in the sotre. Unaware of the change in management, the dog arrived wearing his mottled tangerine coat and carrying a milk jug with change in it. He took up his usual station, waiting to be served.

Mr. Lewis said: "I didn't believe it, and sent him home. Shortly afterward he came back with his owner and the fellow said the dog wanted a jug of milk. So I opened some quart bottles, took the change inside the jug and filled it. We've continued ever since.

"He trots right up, or if it's winter and the door is closed, he jumps up and puts his paw on the door so I'll open it. He sits in the same spot until I come to him, and he's got a change purse and a list of things. I take them, fill the order, and send him on his way."

Big Sister Movement Enters Schools Here

The Big Sister movement has spread to Victoria schools.

A. J. Longmore, superintendent of the Greater Victoria School Board, has given his approval for teachers to refer students they think would benefit from the group to Big Sisters.

The plan will come into effect this fall in the city's elementary and secondary schools.

"A teacher must obtain the approval of the parent or guardian before referring the child," Longmore said. "The Big Sister organization has followed the suit of Big Brothers which approached the school board four of five years ago."

Motherless Girls are Rare

The Big Brother and Big Sister organizations provide adult friendship for children, eight to 15 years of age.

Mrs. Norma Fitzsimmons, president of the Victoria chapter of Big Sisters, said the original purpose of the group was to work with motherless girls.

"But there aren't many around," she said. "When a home breaks up, the mother usually gains custody of the children, while the father leaves."

However, some girls may not be getting enough attention from their mothers, because they may work or have other children to look after, said Mrs. Fitzsimmons. Other girls may feel lonely and shunned by other children.

Applicants are Carefully Screened

The organization matches little sisters with big sisters, according to personality, interests, and, if possible, religious affiliations. A Big Sister applicant must be 20 years of age or more, and is carefully screened to determine that she is reliable and "trustworthy."

A Big Sister pledges to spend a minimum of three hours a week with her listtle sister. The way in which the time is spent is determined by the child's needs, interests and time available.

A Big Sister may take the child for a drive, skating, to a movie, or spend an evening at her home as part of the family.

So far, 20 women, married and single, have applied, Mrs. Fitzsimmons said.

In the Long, Hot Days of Summer These Students Take to School

FAMILY SECTION

Students say summer is the best time for learning.

And that's because they're away from school.

But most students who attended summer school in Victoria this year say summer is the best time for learning at school, too.

Although summer school would seem a dreaded invasion of a well-deserved holiday, most summer school students agree that a course repeated at this time of year is learned and remembered.

The main reason, they say, is that a year-long course is concentrated into one month's time.

"It just proved that we could learn more in a much shorter period of time," said Larry Psister, who studied Grade 10 French this summer at S. J. Willis Junior Secondary.

It was also a help to have a "good teacher for a change," some said.

"I was away a lot during the year," said Cheryl Adelman, who repeated Grade 10 math. "But I never understood the teacher anyway."

She said she found summer math easy because of the "the way the teacher taught it."

There weren't as many students in the class and, because they were all there for one reason, concentration was easier, she added.

Those Eligible

Only Grade 9 and 10 students who failed English, French, math, social studies or science, and Grade 11 and 12 students who failed English are eligible for summer school.

These students require an application, signed by their school principal, explained Harry Bigsby, principal of academic summer school for the Greater Victoria School Board.

Teachers, too, apply to teach at summer school, he said. They're selected for the experience and knowledge.

"They like it," Bigsby said. "They believe it's a true teaching climate, because the kids are there because they want to learn."

Single courses cost $18.50, except for Grade 11 and 12 English, which costs $27. Two courses cost $35, and Grade 11 English and one Grade 10 subject cost $44.

Each subject is taught for 1½ hours a day and students may take only two subjects. The courses cover the essentials of each subject, Bigsby said.

"All the school does is recommend that the student go to summer school. Whether he goes or not is up to the student."

Grade 9 students have the highest enrolment at summer school, with Grade 9 math topping the list of subjects failed. Of the 600 students who attended 1971 summer school, 60 failed, Bigsby added.

The school board expected a 20 per cent decline in summer school applicants this year because of the introduction of the semester systems in some schools, Bigsby said. But the final enrolment was slightly higher than last year.

Rate High

Dr. John Weins, director of instruction for Greater Victoria School Board, said the high passing rate "stands to reason, that with an extra month they'll do better, especially since the attention is focused on one subject.

"If they have 10 months to do a job, they'll procrastinate. When they come to summer school, they know they have to work," he added.

Bigsby said "summer school programs are designed for students who are salvageable — those with potential.

"Some just don't care, of course, but others aren't dumb, they've just slacked off.

"Students don't appreciate having their summer broken up — but they do tend to come through with better performance the following year," he said.

Future Optimistic

Weins said he is optimistic about the future of summer school courses.

He said the improved organizational skills in school programming will eliminate summer school as it is now. It will be easier to pick up courses during the regular school term, he said.

"I would like to bring summer happening courses (creative interest courses) closer to academic courses, so the academics aren't so dry and threatening.

"Summer school should be more fun, like the recreational and interest courses. People should be learning for learning's sake," Weins said.

Unhappy Cripple Myth Upset by Psychologists

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of psychologists reported Monday that new findings challenge the traditional assumption that handicapped, crippled or malformed people are less happy or enjoy life less than normal folks.

Dr. Paul Cameron of the University of Louisville and Dr. D. Van Hoeck and two associates of Wayne State University, Detroit, reported their findings to the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

Their major conclusion from a study involving 144 malformed individuals and 151 normal persons were that there was not only no difference between the two groups as regards various degrees of life satisfaction; outlook on what lies immediately ahead; and vulnerability to frustrations, but "a higher proportion of normals claimed to have contemplated suicide . . . and . . . there is also a suggestion that normals who contemplated and/or attempted suicide may have done so more frequently than the malformed subjects."

The malformed judged their lives more difficult than those of normals — but this did not make them less happy.

The malformed group, they said, included 64 with paralysis; 37 with a muscular difficulty; 16 with a defogmed limb; 12 with a lost limb or congenitally missing extremity; 11 who were blind; and four with a hearing difficulty.

Smoke Ban Urged

BAD HOMBURG, Germany (UPI) — Non-smokers can inhale the smoke from a pack of cigarettes merely by spending a day in a smoke-filled room, a doctor told the first European Council on Smoking and Health Tuesday.

Dr. D. M. Cousin of Paris said long periods spent in rooms filled with smoke have little effect on cigarette users.

"But a non-smoker in the same room will inhale the equivalent of the smoke from a pack of cigarettes during eight hours in the same room," he said. "It is unfair that smoking is allowed in public places because the non-smoker has much less resistance than the cigarette user to smoking's initial harmful effects."

Child's Life Can Depend On Choice of Babysitter

Mrs. Georgina Vessey babysits Paul and Janice Cottingham, 9 and 8, and dogs

Saanich fireman Dave Hill shows mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Mrs. John McKenzie

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

When it comes to babysitters, some mothers throw their usual caution and common sense to the wind.

If their regular sitter fails them they will often hire her friend's friend — a complete stranger who may not be responsible.

Parents and teen-agers seem to believe that at about 14 years of age any girl can babysit.

The Canada Safety Council takes a dim view of this belief.

They have developed a course for babysitters 13 to 17 years of age that teaches the attitudes, responsibilities and techniques of child care.

The Capital Region Safety Council here plans to make this course available to interested groups.

This fall the Saanich fire department will repeat the successful training course for babysitters it has sponsored for two years. The course, provided by the B.C. Safety Council, is similar to that offered by the Canada Safety Council. Lieut. R. A. Slater of the Saanich fire department, describes the course as an "intensive program" that covers basic child care as well as advice on emergencies.

Handling Mishaps

"Guest lecturers are invited to speak on their specialty," he said.

"We had a doctor advise on the proper techniques for handling convulsions and accidents, and primary school teachers spoke on pre-school activities."

Sitters were taught mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and how to behave in a fire. They also learn how to bath, change, feed and handle a young baby.

The safety council course insists that parents leave a number where they can be reached, the number of their doctor and the number of a friend or relative.

Slater said that sitters are asked to adopt a code of ethics: Never leave the house for any reason, never spank or threaten, avoid comparing children in their care, respect the belongings of their employers and never carry tales from house to house.

A mark of 80 per cent is needed to graduate from the course.

The Canada Safety Council also advises parents to tell sitters details of the child's schedule, likes and dislikes. One Victoria sitter spent a miserable evening because the baby kept screaming for his "Nyang Nyang." She had no way of knowing he wanted his toy lion and couldn't sleep without it.

"The sitter should also be informed of any dangers about the house such as frayed cords or broken steps," the council says.

The council warns sitters "not to open the door to strangers and to report annoying phone calls to police."

Mature, bonded sitters are available from a Victoria agency.

Mrs. Grace Anderson has 50 sitters all over 45 years of age on call. "Most are widows or pensioners," Mrs. Anderson said.

Her sitters must all pass an examination based on general knowledge and common sense. Once they pass the exam the sitters are put on a month's probation. If there are no complaints during the month they are hired permanently.

Mrs. Anderson said that her agency also supplies care for elderly people. "The sitters will clean, cook and care for the elderly so that children can have a day off."

The fee for babysitting is 75 cents an hour — higher if the sitter is asked to do housework.

'At All Times'

Housework is banned if the baby is less than a year old. "The sitter is supposed to watch an infant at all times," Mrs. Anderson said.

She has some retired registered nurses on her staff who are willing to sit with badly handicapped or retarded children.

Student nurses are often willing to babysit for an evening and are a good local source of reliable sitters. Secondary school students enrolled in the child care courses also have a good knowledge of basic care and child behavior.

According to the safety council, the ultimate responsibility for the children's safety belongs to the parents.

It's up to them to choose a responsible person to babysit and provide her with the information needed to do a good job.

Sand in eyes can be tricky for sitter

FROM MATH TO VISUAL ARTS

Teaching Through Puppets Urged

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Marionettes can be used to teach mathematics, music, muscle control, theatre and visual arts to kindergarten children, says Micheline Legendre of Montreal.

Miss Legendre, who organized the International Marionette Festival for Expo 67 and has been involved in three National Film Board and 350 Canadian Broadcasting Corp. productions, refers to her marionettes as her "children."

Teaching real children how to operate the marionettes, using strings attached to wooden sticks, helps them develop muscle control, she says. Rhythm and an appreciation of music are developed by involving children in staging a show.

Miss Legendre, here for a performance at a new theatre, instructed 600 kindergarten teachers from Quebec in use of puppets and marionettes as teaching aids last year.

She has built about 400 marionettes from wood and plastic wood, first making sculptures of the characters for productions which include classic fairy tales and original stories.

About 20 years ago she formed the Montreal Marionettes, a company which has from six to 12 live members and has toured Europe and North America, adapting productions to the countries or regions in which they are staged.

Baby Girl's Birth Stuns Father

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Donald Bailey of Spokane expressed shock when his wife gave birth to a baby girl Sunday — it was the first girl born in the family in three generations.

"I was shocked," Bailey said. "There was no question in my mind but what it would be a boy."

A mathmetician had told Bailey the chances against the first girl born in the family since 1890 were 1,100 to one, but Bailey said he and his wife "think we'll keep" Jennifer Dawn.

Lynda Crabtree, 18, holds retarded child

'YOU HAVE TO BE STRONG TO WORK HERE'

High School Students Work With Retarded

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — The term RSVP has taken on new meaning for students who worked with patients at the Ontario hospital for the mentally retarded.

They were among the 225 high school students hired by the provincial government at a cost of $90,000 to provide summer help for Ontario's 10 institutions for the mentally retarded.

Forty-three of them were at this resort area as a result of a new program called RSVP, for Retardation Summer Vacation Project. The project, initiated by an organization called Youth Across Canada for the Mentally Retarded, enabled the students to earn $400 for eight weeks of work.

'You Get Upset'

It was the first time high school students under 18 years have been permitted to work in hospitals for the retarded.

Debbie Ramey, 16, of Thistletown, Ont., spoke for many of the students when she said:

"You have to be strong to work here. There are times when you feel like you're losing your identity. I'd ask myself if I was a real person.

"You change from a calm person, apparently without nerves and never swearing to being a different person. You get upset, you start using language you never used before."

Lose Control

Fred Ford, 18, of St. Catharines, Ont., found himself short-tempered.

"After you work here for a while you lose your self control — a little more each day. You find out how quickly you can lose your patience. That's one thing I learned. I know my own limit — how far I can go."

Most of the students worked in the hospital's activity program, taking patients for walks, playing games and taking them on picnics. The hospital has 2,000 patients, who range in age from five years to senior citizens, and there are 1,100 regular staff members.

Hospital administrator Richard Wilson spoke enthusiastically about the students.

"Nobody was saying get these kids out of here. On the contrary, they've been a big help to the staff. Their enthusiasm must do something for the residents.

"We could use 60 or 70 of them."

Volunteer Work, 'Drudge' Jobs Condemned by Liberation Group

VENICE, Calif. (UPI) — The National Organization for Women (NOW) has gone on record against volunteer work and urged in a resolution that "all services and drudge jobs be converted into paid employment."

The resolution was one of 50 policies and action programs passed at the three-day national conference of NOW which ended here earlier this week.

The resolution on volunteerism distinguised "between voluntary activities which serve to maintain woman's dependent and secondary status on the one hand and change-directed activities which lead to more active participation in the decision making process."

NOW, described as the oldest and largest feminist group in the women's liberation movement, also took a stand on war.

"We, as feminists seek to bring a universal end to war . . . and, call for the immediate end of the military conflict in Indochina."

In the keynote weekend address, outgoing NOW president Aileen Hernandez, of San Francisco, told the 500 gathered members, "other groups are beginning to latch on to our movement and turn it toward causes that they are concerned about.

"But we're not going to be taken over — we spell our own name, declare our own causes and define our own strategy and tactics," she added.

"We have begun, but only just begun, to feel our power and to see it achieve results, see it move the system which has oppressed us.

"Not only do we plan to survive but we plan to take over. We are the last great hope of civilization — if women can't cause a revolution of humanistic values then it cannot be done."

One of the 28 workshops held during the convention was conducted by Betty Friedan, founder of NOW.

She told of the National Women's Political Caucus, formed recently in Washington, D.C. and described plans for state caucuses in California, Florida, Michigan, Kansas and other states.

"We're not going to get all the changes we want until we get more women elected to office, but we couldn't have used the vote for ourselves until we liberated ourselves," she said.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the 73-year-old woman who wondered if a doctor could prescribe something to pep up her 91-year-old husband who hadn't touched her in two years. I don't believe it! not about the man — the woman.

I am a 69-year-old man and I'm as peppy today as I was 40 years ago, and I show no signs of slowing up. I'm married to a 65-year-old woman who would be happy if I never touched her again. I have been a faithful husband for over 40 years, but right now I would like to meet that 73-year-old fireball, and I wouldn't care what she looked like either.

Our neighborhood is full of widows, and not one of them has any zip left. I new all their husbands and the frustrations they suffered. Please ask your medical experts why women lose their interest in sex so much earlier than men. — Still Interested at 69.

DEAR STILL: I asked. And it's not true.

DEAR ABBY: Occasionally you put your foot in your mouth, and in replying to the wife who was bugged by her husband's hobby of model railroading you really did it.

Your statement, "Railroads are becoming as extinct as whooping cranes," is not true for actual railroads, and is less true for the scale-model railroad hobby. — T.J.C.

DEAR T.J.C.: I made no mention whatsoever of the scale-model railroad hobby. I was referring to passenger trains. In 1929 there were 20,000 daily passenger trains in the United States; today there are fewer than 400, hence my whooping crane comment.

LATE TAX PAYMENTS BUG SAANICH COUNCIL

Saanich municipal administrator John Tribe has been asked to report to council on possible ways of alleviating the problem of unintentionally late tax payments.

The decision by the council's finance and legislative committee Tuesday night followed complaints from several residents that they had a surcharge imposed for late payment of taxes, despite their claim they had mailed their cheques the day before the due date.

DIFFERENT VIEWS

One resident said he had posted his tax payment June 29, fully expecting it would arrive at the municipal hall by the 5 p.m. deadline the following day. But the letter was not delivered until July 2.

Another complained that, as the tardy postal service was to blame for late arrival of his cheque, the Post Office should be required to pay the surcharge.

As the committee chewed over the problem for 40 minutes, several different views were expressed.

Ald. William Noel said he sympathized with those taxpayer such as old age pensioners who relied on pension cheques arriving at the end of the month in order to meet their taxes.

To accommodate such people he wondered if the final date for payment could be made July 4 or 5.

Committee chairman Ald. Foster Isherwood suggested that perhaps the postmark date could be accepted as a form of validation, as was the practice in Victoria.

But Ald. Leslie Passmore disagreed with both these proposals. There had to be a cut-off line somewhere, he said, and no matter how many days this was put back there would always be those "who come and swear on a stack of Bibles" that they posted their payments in time. He felt the council should continue its present policy.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said there was nothing to prevent taxpayers sending in post-dated cheques, as much as three weeks ahead of the required time if necessary.

Tribe said he thought this would pose no particular administrative problems, but he had some doubts about the postmark validation proposal.

He said a lot of big firms have their own cancelling meters and if they missed the last date for paying they might be tempted to "back up the meter a couple of days."

Dog Team 'Success'

Saanich council's trial summer program for nudging dog owners gently into paying their dog licence fees has proved agreat success, the council's finance and legislative committee was told Tuesday night.

The committee heard that a canvassing team of five which made house-to-house calls on dog owners sold 340 tags for total revenue of $1,830.

Canvassers received 25 per cent commission on sales, and the net proceeds to the council were $1,372.

The committee agreed to recommend the program be continued next summer.

It is also recommending that — in cases where the canvasser encounters an owner reluctant to pay, and the subsequent report to the pound keeper results in a tag sale — the canvasser should be entitled to 15 per cent commission.

SAYS SANDRINGHAM HEAD

Strikers 'Not Fit to Talk To'

Sandringham Private Hospital administrator Mrs. Margaret Reynolds said Tuesday she "wouldn't have anything to do" with striking employees.

"They are not fit people to have anyting to do with people (patients) of this nature," she told a luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club.

She commented after this question from the audience: "Have you had any recent contact with the strikers and are you interested in talking to them."

Mrs. Reynolds said she hasn't talked to them.

One Kiwanian said "I commend you for fighting the union," but asked about the economics of the hospital and pay proposals by the Canadian Union of Public Employees, whose 28 members have been on strike since last Sept. 30 for a first contract and a wage scale starting at $1.50 an hour rising to $2 an hour after 24 months' service.

Mrs. Reynolds said there is "a very high overhead" and there "just isn't the money" to pay $2 an hour.

"At the end of the month there is very little left. There has never been a dividend paid to anyone from Sandringham," she said.

DISAPPOINTING

She said church support for the strikers was "disappointing." She said ministers had not come to the hospital.

She was asked if the financial books of the company have been opened.

"No," she replied. She felt it was not CUPE's business but added "I have nothing to hide."

Mrs. Reynolds said patients have not suffered because of the strike and no patients have been lost because of the strike.

One Kiwanian said his mother is in Sandringham and received "lovely care." There was wide applause.

Mrs. Reynolds, who has been administrator at Sandringham since 1965, said the strikers walked out "laughing and thought it was a great joke. This is something I'll never forget. There were seven of us left in the hospital. They walked out when a meal was to be served and left the patients."

STEADY STAFF

She said "labor did get to the husbands of ladies working with us, so it was quite an experience holding staff, but we have had steady staff for the last four months.

"The women on the picket line are quite outspoken and it has been hard to take their remarks. I have brought in the supplies myself in a little car."

She also said "labor will not allow anyone to repair any item" and referred to earlier problems with a furnace and a dishwasher.

"This sort of thing does something to you to think that labor will not allow this to be done," she said.

"There should be a rule somewhere. The people on the picket line are not the type to be working near people, older people.

"There should be some dignity and freedom left and labor is coming in on everyone."

DO NOTHING

She also said few of the original strikers are still picketing. The others have got jobs, she said.

Referring to some of the earlier incidents at the hospital, she said "I had 16 people try to pull me from the car. I phoned the police, but they said they could do nothing.

"This is why I have had to hire guards. The oil tank is at the back of the hospital and it has to be watched."

Campbell Will Aid Tax Relief Scheme

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said he would be happy to ask the legislature to allow the city to grant property tax relief to persons 65 and older, provided Victoria city council makes an official request.

Campbell said Tuesday he would seek to amend the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act to enable Victoria to proceed with such a scheme if council passes a formal resolution.

The amendment would take the form of an exemption for Victoria from provincial legislation which requires property with delinquent taxes to be sold at after a set period.

Under a scheme put forward by Mayor Courtney Haddock, elderly property owners would be able to defer paying increases in taxes above the 1970 levy until their property is sold or their estate closed.

ONLY VICTORIA

Campbell said the amendment would affect only Victoria, but he said the provincial government is also considering the whole question of aid for elderly property owners on a broader scale.

He said property tax relief should be only one of a number of options available for such homowners. Another option is the 5-5-5 plan under which older home-owners sell their single-family homes and move into condominium units with a $5,000 down-payment, a $5,000 first mortgage and a $5,000 provincial government second mortgage, Campbell said.

The scheme would provide many home-owners with immediate investment — or leisure — capital, Campbell said.

Sunshine Needed

CALGARY (CP) — One to three weeks of good weather is needed to complete the harvest in Alberta with about 36 per cent of the threshing of wheat, oats, barley and rapeseed completed, the Alberta Wheat Pool said Tuesday.

The pool, in its weekly crop report, said just more than two million acres were threshed last week and another week was needed in southern areas and two weeks in central and northern regions.

The harvest in northern areas has been hampered by rain.

Kosygin Hoping for Nixon Invitation?

LONDON (CP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin's planned visit to Canada is viewed here primarily as an indication of Russia's extreme concern at signs of a possible easing of tensions between the United States and China.

Observers also add that the visit, beginning Oct. 18, is a clear acknowledgement of the favorable impression made on Soviet leaders by Prime Minister Trudeau during a visit to Russia earlier this year.

Some commentators said Kosygin may be hoping to receive an invitation to visit U.S. President Richard Nixon while in Canada.

Sources say Soviet leaders place great importance on the possibility of a summit conference with Nixon before the president's planned trip to China early next year.

FEAR CHINA GAINS

Officials here appear convinced that the reason Soviet leaders are planning extensive trips to many parts of the world soon is to counter what they fear may be substantial diplomatic gains by China.

British sources say they believe the Russians are trying to convince the world of their peaceful intent and counter moves, particularly by the Americans, to strengthen ties with China as a method of combatting Soviet influence.

The feeling here is that both Moscow and North Vietnam fear that Peking and Washington may be planning "an Indochina deal" without consulting other Communist elements in that area.

Most British newspapers also saw the planned visit as aimed primarily at developing closer contact with Washington.

DUTY WILL HIT RAF

VALLETTA (Reuter) — Malta has banned duty-free fuel for foreign military forces on the island following what the government called stalemate in financial talks with Britain over use of defence bases.

The decision, announced in an official statement Tuesday night, particularly affects the RAF whose reconnaissance planes based here keep watch on Soviet warships in the Mediterranean.

The department of information said: "A stalemate has been reached between the Maltese and British governments in financial talks.

"As a first step, the government is withholding duty-free fuel to foreign forces in these islands."

The announcement did not indicate what further measures might be undertaken by the newly-elected Labor government of Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, who wants Britain to pay more for her use of land, sea and air bases on Malta.

Longshore Talks Go on Today In Face of Reduced Dock Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — Talks beteeen Vancouver longshoremen and the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association continue today against a background of reduced work on the docks and a threatened cargo glut.

All dock work has been reduced to six day shifts a week as a result of a dispute between the two sides. Normally, there is round-the-clock work, 21 shifts a week.

Louis Kaufman, president of the Vancouver local of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, said the dockers put a three-point proposal to the association Tuesday:

- Registered work gangs should be assigned to night work, as under the previous agreement between the two sides;
- The association should not instruct its member companies not to place orders for night work when such work is available;
- The association should not cancel night work without agreement between the two sides or proper notice to the union.

"Really, all we're asking is that they live up to the previous agreement," Kaufman said.

Last week, employers reduced work on deepsea vessels to six day shifts a week but retained 21-shift work, involving payment of overtime rates, on bulk loading and coastal shipping.

SEE VIOLATION

The union, viewing the move as a violation of last February's agreement, retaliated by refusing to dispatch gangs for any work after 5 p.m. or on Sundays.

Association President Ed Strang has said the original selective trimming of work came because the number of men working the higher-paid night and weekend shifts had risen to the point where not enough men were available for the day shifts on regular time pay of $4.88 an hour.

"What we wanted was to get sufficient labor to do as much work as possible," he said Tuesday.

"We acted because we were getting fewer and fewer key personnel turning out during the day because they were doing other jobs at night or at weekends to earn premium pay."

MEANT WORK

The union has about 1,800 regular members, but the flood of cargo diverted from strike-bound ports of the U.S. west coast has meant work for casuals, raising the number of men employed to about 3,500 at peak times.

"We expected the hear them (the employers) rattling their chains at the weekend, but we heard nothing from them," Kaufman said.

"We need three shifts around the clock, seven days a week, if we are ever to get anywhere."

Fears have been expressed that the new pattern of trimmed dock work, combined with the greatly increased volume of shipping using the harbor, could result in the harbor seizing up within a couple of weeks.

"It will take two days for the effect of their action to show," said acting port manager Bill Duncan.

"But obviously the bulk loading terminals will be hit."

Electrocution Death Cause

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year-old housewife who collapsed and died after stepping onto a health spa vibrating machine was electrocuted, an inquest jury was told Tuesday.

Pathologist Dr. Thomas Harmon gave this finding after the jury had viewed the body of Shirley Anne Findlay.

Mrs. Findlay, mother of a one-year-old girl, went into convulsions seconds after using the figure-building vibrator a tthe Palm Springs Health Spa last Friday.

TRUDEAU ASKED TO JOIN GREENPEACE BOMB TRIP

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Don't Make a Wave Committee has invited Prime Minister Trureau to join the Greenpeace when it sails Sept. 15 to protest the proposed United States underground nuclear test at Amchitka Island in the Aleutians.

The committee sent the prime minister a telegram which said the protestors will be aboard the Greenpeace because they believe President Nixon will not be persuaded by "words or polite diplomatic notes" to cancel the test scheduled for next month.

The telegram asked Trudeau "To put your actions behind your words by joining us aboard the Greenpeace."

The Greenpeace is an 85-foot Canadian halibut boat, chartered by the committee to carry the protest group of 12 persons into the test area.

Expensive Guess Exhausted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A CP Air spokesman said Tuesday night that a man was arrested in Surrey Tuesday after an anonymous caller told the airline a bomb was aboard one of its flights in the air, demanding $20,000 to say which one.

Spokesman Ron Keith said an RCMP stakeout of the designated "drop off" point in Surrey led to the arrest of the driver of a light truck who tried to pick up the money.

The spokesman said there were only three CP Air flights in the air at the time of the phone call.

"A routine check of the aircraft was made but nothing resembling a bomb was found," he said.

Bail Set In Rape Of 2 Girls

LANGLEY (CP) — Bail was set at $2,000 Tuesday when Stephen John Jolleys, 21, of Surrey appeared in court on two charges of rape. Preliminary hearing was set for Nov. 2.

The charges allege that Jolleys picked up two 14-year-old hitch-hikers Monday night and forced them at knifepoint into the back of a van he was driving.

Police said the two girls, both from Surrey, later walked nude into a nearby trailer court looking for help.

Hunter Shot With Deer

CLEARWATER (CP) — Alvin Raymond Johnston, 29, of Surrey was accidentally shot and killed while on a hunting excursion in the Dunn Lake area. He apparently was hit when another member of the party shot a deer.

Nixon's Emergency Is Actually Already 20 Years Old

By KEN W. CLAWSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States has been in a state of national emergency during the entire lifetime of more than half its citizens.

When President Richard Nixon established a wage-price freeze last month, he did so under special powers that are among those granted by more than 200 laws giving him virtually unlimited prerogatives anytime he feels the nation is in a crisis situation. In a sense, he filled out and cashed one of a pocketful of blank cheques provided presidents of the United States over the last generation.

POWERS SPELLED OUT

Under current emergency powers, for example, the government is not required to advertise for bids for property or services. The fact that it does so is cited by White House and justice officials as "executive discipline" in not using powers it possesses.

The president also may requisition any ship owned by a citizen or under construction in the U.S. He may seize foreign ships, even in the Panama Canal Zone, if he "finds it to be necessary to the national defence." Or he can take back portions of former federal property that have been turned over to others — such as a hunting and refuge area in Des Plaines, Ill.

No president has given the slightest indication of terminating the national emergency and relinquishing his special powers, even though most officials of the executive branch will admit that conditions of the depression, Second World War and the cold war are hardly applicable now. So the blank cheques remain.

When Nixon ordered the wage-price freeze, he declared a national emergency with respect to floating the dollar and imposing a 10 per cent import tax. The proclamation wasn't necessary, according to William Rehnquist, assistant attorney-general in charge of the Justice Department's office of legal counsel.

The president already enjoyed the power to regulate financial transactions between Americans and foreigners by virtue of a national emergency declared by President Roosevelt in 1933 and superseded by another emergency proclaimed by President Truman in 1950.

Rehnquist said Nixon went through the motions to "focus public attention on the seriousness of the situation."

Nixon was also acting under cover of the continuous national emergency earlier this year when he suspended the Davis-Bacon Act which stipulates that the government must pay prevailing wage rates in the construction industry.

20 YEARS

Although the president's action was designed to deal with the current problem of excessive wage rates in the industry, it was authorized by congressional mandate some 20 years earlier.

Nixon's first move under the banner of a national emergency was taken during the postal strike of 1970 when he called out troops to deliver the mail. In this instance a proclamation was required because presidential authority to activate up to a million reservists was not granted by Congress until Jan. 1, 1953, three years after the Truman emergency.

Rehnquist stressed that in Nixon's three actions the executive was involved in "limited" usage of emergency powers. He acknowledged the actions were limited only because the president deemed it so. All 200 emergency statutes, plus 13 post-1950 laws, are operative.

'Idiot' Builds $3,000 Plane

EDMONTON (CP) — Neil Postle's non-flying friends no longer regard him as an "eccentric idiot."

The Edmonton man built a Baby Great Lakes single-seater biplane in his garage and federal officials who have inspected it say the aircraft is one of the best-built they have ever seen.

"When you tell anyone that you're going to build a plane, they think you belong to the same class of people that walk tightrope over Niagara Falls or sail the Atlantic solo," Mr. Postle said in an interview.

"When they realize you're actually going to do it—when you're 90 per cent finished—you're a hero all of a sudden."

After you begin flying, you're no longer the "eccentric idiot."

A commercial pilot friend was giving the craft the 75 hours of extensive testing necessary for a flying permit.

WIFE STARTED HIM

Mr. Postle, a computer technician, enjoys building things. His Baby Great Lakes cost about $3,000 and a comparable, commercially-made plane is available in Canada for about $28,000.

His wife, Shirley, "hates flying" but was resigned to her husband's long hours building the plane.

"I get lots of company from the wives of the men that come over to help Neil with the plane," she said.

Mr. Postle said his wife got him started on the plane. He was building model aircraft which cost up to $300 apiece. His wife suggested that if he was going to spend that much on models, "you might as well build a real one."

More than three years ago he started on the plane, building the wing assembly on the kitchen table in their apartment, and cramming the living room with bits and pieces. Mr. Postle said that an understanding wife is essential to the at-home plane builder.

HELP PROVIDED

He had never welded, riveted or over-hauled an engine before he began building his plane, but he got plenty of help from three fellow at-home-plane builders who visited him in his garage every night.

He contends his plane is stronger than any comparable, commercially-made plane on the market.He u sed or altered many regulation aircraft parts and included some features, disk brakes for example, not available on factory-made aircraft.

Among special problems is the fact home-builts are not eligible for a certificate of airworthiness from the federal transport department, making public liability insurance expensive and passenger insurance "almost impossible."

Also the cost for a city home-builder of keeping and operating a plane at a city airport is prohibitive, even with lower prices from such as the Edmonton Flying Club.

Thus many prefer to keep their craft at out-of-town fields or private airfields, renting space and avoiding airport usage fees.

Nordics For Peking

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — The Nordic countries will vote as a bloc for Communist China's admission to the United Nations, it was announced after a foreign ministers' meeting Tuesday.

At a news conference following the biannual two-day meeting Poul Hartling, the Danish host, said Iceland had joined the "one-China policy" that Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland had voiced for several years.

"The seat called China in the UN belongs to Peking, not Formosa - China," Hartling said.

The Nordic ministers also condemned the presence of South African troops in Namibia, South West Africa, saying:

"The international court in The Hague has ruled South Africa's presence there is illegal."

A Cheap Blue Book Tells Part Of Ho's Life as an Infiltrator

By HOLGER JENSEN

PREY NHAY, Cambodia (AP) — He came down the Ho Chi Minh trail with an AK47 rifle, a Chairman Mao button, a booklet of Communist party regulations and a cheap blue notebook containing a small part of his life.

Hoang Duc Ho wore a corporal's insignia and he was apparently a medic—pages of the notebook were filled with neat, cramped handwriting on how to treat the sick and wounded. There were also identity papers, letters from friends, testimonials of bravery, revolutionary songs and a picture of Ho Chi Minh inscribed: "I vow to follow the uncle and learn from him all my life."

A passport issued "for purposes of visiting his brother and buying family supplies" said Ho was born in 1947 in Quang Ninh province, on the northern coast of North Vietnam hard by the Chinese border.

Marital status: single. Nationality: Tay. Religion: Luong. Soldier No. 033.

Ho was a farm boy. One of his boyhood friends, Vi Xuan Tuy, wrote him a letter saying: "Remember how we took care of the water buffalo and cows on the co-operative? Remember how we shared everything from a handful of rice to wild fruit? How meaningful our friendship is!"

Ho was a child of the French Indochina War, seven years old when the French were defeated at Dien Bien Phu.

He joined the Communist party in 1968 and took his political obligations seriously. A 1971 notation in his own handwriting proclaims proudly: "Ho has paid all his membership dues."

He also was obsessed with reunifying the two Vietnams. His notebook has poems and slogans exemplifying this resolve. One says: "unify the nation for socialism . . ."

Ho's notebook makes clear that he expected to fight "American aggressors" rather than South Vietnamese troops.

He was apparently a generous commander. His notebook had a citation for one of his men, "A.C.", describing him as a "model person, honest, never afraid to attack."

His most treasured possession appeared to be a dog-eared letter written by his friend Tuy on Oct. 1 three years ago. "Today, on the occasion of Chinese National Day I am sitting in my house and miss you very much," it said. "Dear friend, I don't know how to express all the faith and hope in my heart for you. I hope you will try hard, study hard and work hard to deserve to be an elite member of the Vietnam revolutionary party. . . .

"I will send supplies to the front to feed you and our armies so that we can destroy completely those aggressive American monsters . . . Then we'll be able to meet again in a spring of blooming flowers."

The letter was in Ho's effects when he died with a bellyful of M16 bullets, in a Cambodian rice paddy.

STUDENT LOAN DEFAULTS—4%

OTTAWA (CP) — The default rate on loans under the Canada student loans plan is about four per cent, amounting to about $5.4 million on the $135 million in loans now due to be repayed, a finance department source said today.

More than $300 million in loans has been made since the Canadian plan's inception in 1964. During that time, however, the federal government has only had to make good about $5 million in loans it was unable eventually to collect.

The student loans program provides for government-guaranteed bank loans to students who need funds to continue full-time studies beyond the secondary school level.

The loans are interest-free to the students during full-time study and for six months afterwards. The loans are then repayable over a period of up to 9½ years and borrowers must pay interest during that time.

MAXIMUM $5,000

Loans may be authorized by provincial authorities up to $1,000 a student during each academic year with a maximum loan of $5,000 for a student's entire post-secondary education.

If, during the six months after his studies are completed, a student with such a loan does not make arrangement with the bank for its repayment or provide proof that he is back in university, the loan goes technically into default, at the end of the six months.

The bank then allows about three months to arrange for the repayment of the loan, but if it is unsuccessful after making the necessary effort it may make a claim on the government.

Pop Fans Invade Sacred Field

LONDON (CP) — One day a long time ago, so the story goes, the then Prince of Wales, now the Duke of Windsor, had the idea of setting up greyhound racing at the Kennington Oval.

A furious Oval club member rushed to Buckingham Palace and King George V instantaneously issued a royal veto.

The Oval is one of the citadels of cricket, on the south side of the Thames, ranking just next to revered Lords. It is the traditional spot where visiting test teams play their final match.

Now The Oval—to the consternation of some cricket purists—is to be invaded by pop. There will be a music festival on the hallowed grounds Sept. 12.

And, says a spokesman for Lords, its just possible that this sacrosanct field may be opened up to the pop people in order to stay alive financially.

What scares cricket aficianados about The Oval operation is what pop fans can do to a delicately worked-over field. After a couple of recent pop festivals bringing up to 150,000 people, the ground looked as though a thundering herd of buffalos had been pawing it up.

WILL PROTECT PITCH

However, the Surrey County Cricket Club that runs The Oval says it is going to take a chance and put down giant mats to protect the velvet-green pitches while the youngsters gyrate to the music of such groups as The Who and The Faces.

The money raised is to go to help the people of Bangla Desh (East Pakistan).

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Before returning to England the nephew and niece of the late G. E. Walton would like to thank friends and neighbors for their expressions of sympathy and floral tributes. — Mary Walton, Kathleen, Horace and John.

Mr. Tom Moss and family wish to express their grateful thanks for the flowers and cards sent in the loss of their beloved wife and mother, Francis Mary Moss. Special thanks to the Nurses and Orderlies on the Royal Jubilee Hospital 3rd floor S.E. for their dedication and excellent care.

I wish to thank my friends and neighbours for their kindness and sympathy during the recent loss of my husband James Badni. Special thanks to Dr. L. Ptak the Pallbearers and to McCall Bros.—Mrs. Mary Badni.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BROOKS — Neil Lamont, killed at Westwood Coquitlam, B.C., on Sept. 8, 1968. In cherished memory of the too-few years he was with us, and in grateful acknowledgement of our pride in him. So loved; so sadly missed.
—Herold and Dorothy Brooks.

WOODS — In loving memory of my loving husband Stewart E. Woods, who passed away Sept. 8, 1967.
Though the tears in my eyes do not glisten;
And my face doesn't always look sad,
There is never a night or a morning,
But I think of the husband I had.
"When your heart is near to breaking,
And this earth's a cruel spot;
When you hoped today would bless you, and you know now it will not;
That's the time, with pride and courage,
To brave each cruel mile,
And through shedding tears in secret,
Show the world a splendid smile."
—Lovingly remembered by his loving wife Mary and family.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MANTRAP. 6:30 p.m., Channel 8. Dick Clark (Remember him, way back in the middle 1950s, when rock 'n' roll was it and so was Dick?) faces Abby Dalton, Suzanne Somers and writer June Callwood. Topics include drugs and drug use (Dick disapproves . . . in the good old days it was a jug of rye behind the school at the Saturday night dance) and the intrusion of drug symbolism into modern music lyrics.

★ ★ ★

IF YOU TURN ON. 8 p.m., Channel 7. A penetrating look at the drug problem, produced by KNXT in Los Angeles and already honored with an Emmy award. Jerry Dunphy is the reporter discussing problems with well-known TV personalities Carol Burnett, Greg Morris and Arte Johnson, and medical authorities and young people who talk about their experiences with drugs. There are interesting revelations in comparisons of opinions between medical authorities, the public and users.

★ ★ ★

ROOM 222. 8 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). "Mr. Bomberg." An upheaval is threatened when a long-time teacher mistreats students in his civics class and says some disparaging things to them. The incident spills out of the class and affects the entire school.

★ ★ ★

QUARTERLY REPORT. 9 p.m., Channel 5. A current events program that will be offered four times a year, the premiere segment will originate from the National Archives in Washington, D.C., with John Chancellor as anchor man. Tonight's probing report will deal with the 18-year-old vote and speculation on its effects, capital punishment, and President Nixon's forthcoming visit to Red China. The program will have the modern look, too, with pop artist Peter Max doing short pieces on good news, and David Levene, celebrated New York Review caricaturist, offering his views in drawings.

★ ★ ★

NIGHT GALLERY. 10 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). "The Last Laurel" and "They're Tearing Down Tim Riley's Bar." The two Rod Serling dramas are taut and bizarre. The Last Laurel stars Jack Cassidy as an embittered husband who uses the power of levitation to avenge his wife's infidelities. William Windon stars in They're Tearing Down Tim Riley's Bar, playing a lonely widower who commiserates over a world falling apart, just like Tim Riley's bar, an old hangout which is about to be torn down.

★ ★ ★

NFL ACTION: SUPER BOWL V. 10:30 p.m., Channel 4. This winds up the season for the show. Appropriately enough, it recaptures last January's exciting Super Bowl championship game between the Baltimore Colts and Dallas Cowboys. Fans will get still another close look at the decisive touchdown pass play when Johnny Unitas's forward pass was handled like a hot potato as it flipped into John Mackey's hand after bouncing off the fingers of two other players. Everything will build up to rookie Jim O'Brien's dramatic field goal with five seconds left that gave the Colts the championship.

NOMAD

The reception to the new Nomad line of travel trailers at Coastline Trailer Centre has been terrific. Most people can't believe how a trailer of Nomad's quality can be sold at such unbelievably low prices. The Skyline Corp. which manufactures Nomad is the world's largest builder of mobile homes and travel trailers. That's one reason. Coastline have pared their profit margin to an absolute minimum as an introductory special, so that we can set as many Nomads on the road as possible this Fall. That's reason number two. We invite you to drop into Coastline and compare the fabulous new Nomad quality and price with any other competitive make. We think you'll agree Nomad comes out on top.

Compare this 19½ Tandem axle Nomad for value.

Completely self-contained shower, hot water, toilet, heater, 4-wheel brakes. Many other extras too numerous to mention.

OUR PRICE ONLY $3850

YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

It always distresses me when a person writes to tell me that he, or someone in the family, is unable to find a psychiatrist who is willing to try giving a schizophrenic patient the "megavitamin therapy," developed in 1952 by the Canadian biochemists and psychiatrists, Dr. Abram Hoffer and Humphry Osmond. Even in a big city like New York or Chicago, it is not easy for the parent of a schizophrenic child to find someone who will prescribe for the youngster some niacin or nicotinamide, which is commonly used in the megavitamin treatment. My feeling is that especially when all of the common psychotherapeutic treatments have failed to help the child, a psychiatrist should be willing to try the Hoffer and Osmond treatment.

I have felt for a long time that the megavitamin treatment deserves a trial. I have been impressed by a number of letters and conversations I have had on the improvement schizophrenics have made. Their parents told me that they had spent perhaps thousands of dollars on psychoanalysis — without any result. Then niacin or nicotinamide was used, and in a short time the patient recovered.

Dr. Hoffer is honest in that he does not claim that he can cure all cases. But even if he told me that his method cures only one schizophrenic in five, I would insist on its being tried on a patient of mine who had gotten nowhere with much psychotherapy and perhaps some other drugs.

One thing I feel sure of is that schizophrenia is associated with, or caused by, some abnormalities in the chemistry of the body and the brain. Anyone who has had the sorrow of knowing a schizophrenic person in a psychotic crisis will know that at such a time the person's body chemistry must change in some severe way, because the person may develop a peculiar, strong, acrid body odor. Schizophrenics themselves have commented on their awareness of this peculiar odor. As they come out of the crisis, the odor tends to go away.

People today are more aware of what chemical changes in the body can do to the brain, after having seen the dramatic effects of such chemicals as LSD. Today, also, one of the most distinguished groups of psychiatrists, the Society for Biological Psychiatry, is made up of men who are interested in the chemical changes in the body that produce psychosis; and of late, researchers are finding special chemicals in the bodies of schizophrenics that may be responsible for the distortions in the way they see and respond to the world around them. These psychiatrists know that to treat schizophrenia solely with psychotherapy is like trying to treat a diabetic with psychotherapy. We all know that one has to treat the diabetic with insulin, or, if he got his diabetes late in life, with one of several drugs that can be taken by mouth.

Recently, when in New York City, I attended the splendid meeting of physicians and laymen deeply interested in schizophrenia. Dr. Allan Cott, a well-trained psychiatrist, told how he had been able to help a number of schizophrenic persons with the megavitamin treatment; he agreed with Dr. Hoffer and Osmond that besides the niacin and nicotinamide, other drugs can or should be used, such as drugs for depression, over-excitement, or sleeplessness.

★ ★ ★

My friend, the great Dr. William Sargant, a leader of psychiatry in Great Britian, wrote me recently that he is helping schizophrenics greatly with the drug Thorazine, or chlorpromazine, and is thus enabling many patients to leave the hospitals and go home.

A while ago, three distinguished professors of psychiatry at Harvard wrote that after trying for two years to help schizophrenics with psychotherapy alone, they gave it up and were getting good results with the drug Mellaril, the generic name of which is thioridazine. I recently read a release telling of a study at the Ingram County Children's Psychiatric Day Hospital in Lansing, Michigan, where Mellaril is being used on a number of youngsters with childhood schizophrenia or some brain damage or a severe neurosis, and is helping these youngsters to return to school. They have a lessening of hyperactivity (overactivity), aggressiveness, anxiety, negativism, emotional immaturity, rage outbursts, and an increase in their ability to pay attention. Sixteen of the 20 children receiving the drugs were able to return to their regular classrooms or to half-way schools. All of the 20 children treated with the drug were better.

My impression from reading a great deal of the psychiatric literature is that more and more psychiatrists are getting sufficiently dissatisfied with psychotherapy and sufficiently interested in treatment with drugs. Certainly just to say that a drug is absolutely no good without ever having tried it is not scientific.

BEFORE society leaves its heavy imprint on the human soul, closing the mind with inhibitions and hobbling imagination with restrictions, the faces of the young reflect the joy of living and the delight of discovery. Here AP photographer Lou Krasky captures some of the moments of youthful exuberance before entry into adulthood closes the window that is the face and the carefree fluidity that is the mind.

Thumb Taxi Answer to Those Parental Rows?

PALOS VERDES PENINSULA, Calif. (AP) — In this affluent Los Angeles suburb the teen-age hitchhiker's thumb never fails.

In fact, a teen-ager can telephone for his free ride and the Thumb Taxi will be on the way.

The idea came from a civic committee appointed by the school board to find solutions to problems bugging teen-agers and their parents.

"We found that teen-agers fight with their parents in the summertime and we knew that there is no public transportation on the peninsula," said the committee chairman, Marvin Poer.

"Then we fitted the two together and came up with the idea that one of the reasons why kids fight with their parents is over use of the car." The idea for a free taxi service for the town's kids was born, but the committee couldn't find any cars.

Then the head of a local security company heard about the plan. His cars operate mostly at night. He offered the use of some off-duty cars during the daytime. The company pays for gas and maintenance and teen-age volunteers, most of them girls, do the driving in three-hour shifts.

The cars have been carrying 300 to 600 young people six days a week since the end of July, and the service may continue on Saturdays after school opens.

"The response has been unbelievable," says Poer, "especially from the teen-agers themselves."

Young volunteers man an answering service and relay requests by radio to the cars.

The cars don't stop in front of a customer's house or take him exactly where he wants to go, but they ply established routes.

Flower Shows Serve a Purpose

By HILDA BEASTALL

Flower and vegetable shows this year are serving a great purpose in proving to gardeners and the public in general that everything was not "poor" in Victoria gardens this season.

We have been inclined to blame the slow cool early summer for a lot of ills; then the warm spell in August was blamed for whatever has happened since.

So these fall shows are good for us. We can see for ourselves what a little extra care and a good soil has been able to accomplish with the same general conditions that we blamed.

Hilda

The early Chrysanthemum and Dahlia show opening at 2 p.m. on Friday and continuing Saturday until 9 p.m. will certainly be a revelation to all who do not grow these plants for shows.

The Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society is staging their show of dahlias and 'mums in the hall of Centennial United Church, on Gorge Road East.

On Saturday the 17th annual fall show of the Gordon Head Garden Club will be held in the new Gordon Head Recreation Centre on Lambrick Way, the first turning left off Feltham Road from Shelbourne Street.

From 2 until 9 p.m., the garden club will exhibit all kinds of garden flowers, house plants and fruits and vegetables.

With the current renewed interest in the home growing of food crops in the small garden, visitors to the show will enjoy seeing produce which is named as to variety.

This is the sort of helpful information to be picked up by visiting several of the local shows, making notes and comparing data to reach decisions on what is wanted for one's own garden next year.

Some gardeners have very firm ideas of their own on what shall be grown in their gardens, but even these ideas have often been arrived at by seeing shows, gardens and parks over a long period of years.

Only by observation can we expand our knowledge. When we see certain flowers or vegetables each year a half dozen times at different shows we become familiar with their characteristics; it is one way to know them though we may never grow them ourselves.

Every show is different, for it reflects the policy of the organization behind it, and indicates the gardening potentials of the district.

So visit these two this weekend — Chrysanthemum and Dahlia Show at Centennial Church Hall on Friday and Saturday; and Gordon Head Fall Show at Gordon Head Recreation Centre on Saturday.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

The following deal is a classic example of defensive deception which convinced declarer that a certain situation existed, thereby "Compelling" him to adopt a losing line of play. Had the chicanery not been employed, declarer would have fulfilled his contract with ease. The hand came up in a rubber-bridge game. Nieither side vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	2 ♣	Pass	3 ♣
Dbl.	4 ♣	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

North's double was of the "take-out" variety, and East's four-club bid was of a pre-emptive nature, its aim being to make it more difficult for South to enter into the bidding. South, however, felt no strain when he stepped in with a four-spade bid on his good six-card spade suit.

After capturing the opening lead with his queen of clubs, East studied the dummy. He did not like what he saw, and he quickly came to the conclusion that there seemed to be little hope of defeating South's contract in legitimate fashion. As he viewel the set-up, deception seemed to be the defenders' sole hope.

At trick two, East led the six of hearts, right into the jaws of dummy's holding in that suit. West put up the ten, dummy's jack winning the trick.

From declarer's point of view, there was no doubt that the six-spot was a singleton, and that East was making this lead in the hope that West would obtain the lead before East's trumps were gathered in. A heart return would then enable East to win the trick by ruffing.

The deuce of trumps was next led, South's jack falling to West's ace. West now returned the three of hearts.

Declarer, absolutely certain that East had no more hearts, confidently put up the board's queen. East won this trick with his king, and led another heart. West made haste to ruff this lead, for the setting trick.

Had East led anything but a heart at trick two, declarer would have waltzed in with his contract, since in this case West would never have gotten around to ruffing a third heart lead.

If I might be permitted to revert to the 16th century to express my admiration for East's defensive play, I would say: "There, but for the grace of God, go I."

GREEN EGGS TURN TO GOLD

PURLEIGH, England (CP) — Clara, an Essex hen, lays green eggs that have turned to gold for her owner, farmer Roy Smith. He has sold one for $112.50 and expects two others to fetch $500 each at auction. Experts say Clara, who has already laid two dozen green eggs, is a throwback to an ancient breed.

Russia, U.S. Agree To Modern 'Hot Line'

By MICHAEL GETLER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States and Soviet Union have reached an initial agreement to replace the relatively slow, teletype-style Washington-Moscow "hotline" with communications satellites able to provide a virtually instantaneous link between the two capitals in any crisis, according to diplomatic sources.

The agreement, which still must be formally approved, was reached recently, these sources report. It was worked out by U.S. and Soviet communications experts who have been meeting in Helsinki, Finland, as an adjunct to the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks being held by the two superpowers.

FASTER

Defence department officials, asked about the reported agreement, declined to comment at this time.

The discussions on modernizing the hotline got under way last April. The idea is to make the system faster and less vulnerable to accidental breakdown of eavesdropping by third parties.

The existing hotline runs through undersea cable across the Atlantic, through several switching centres in Europe, and through landlines in both countries. On at least once occasion, the lines were inadvertantly cut by a farmer's plow.

The new system, according to informed sources, will make use, at least initially, of existing communications satellite system already developed and placed in orbit by both countries.

For the United States this would probably mean satellites owned and operated by the Communications Satellite Corporation. Officials indicated that the Pentagon's own network of Comsats would probably not be used.

SEVERAL MONTHS

The Soviet comsat system is known as Molinya.

Sources say that it will probably take several months, assuming formal ratification of the agreement is forthcoming, to install the necessary ground stations and to set-up the space link.

The current hotline was set up in the aftermath of the 1962 Cuban missile crisis when it was found that the communications channels that were then available between the Kremlin and the White House were far too slow for the era of ocean-spanning ballistic missiles.

The line, which is kept open constantly and tested hourly, went into operation Aug. 30, 1963. It has been used only once since then, as Pentagon officials have said earlier, and that was during the 1967 Arab-Israeli crisis.

The existing line, however, transmits only about 60 words per minute. Although there are back-up and alternate routes, both governments were apparently anxious to make the system more foolproof.

Sub Launched

BARROW-IN-Furness, England (Reuter) — Britain's latest nuclear submarine, the $72 million HMS Swiftsure, was launched Tuesday.

Flood Toll Rising

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian army helicopters stood by today to airdrop food supplies to stricken areas of Uttar Pradesh, swept by monsoon floods cutting a swathe of death and destruction across 1,000 miles of northern and eastern India.

The helicopters were deployed in Lucknow, capital of Uttar Pradesh, India's most populous state with 90 million inhabitants. Thirteen persons were reported drowned in the state Tuesday, bringing the death toll to at least 268 since floods struck in July.

In other states, 27 more deaths resulting from the floods were reported. Deaths in all flood-affected states probably total at least 1,150 since July, though in view of widespread and sometimes total disruption of communications and administration accurate figures are impossible to compute and probably never will be known.

Floodwaters continued to rise in Lucknow itself. A quarter of the area of the city of 650,000 people was under two to four feet of water and the Gomati River, which flows through Lucknow before later joining the Ganges, was six feet above the danger mark.

26 DIED WHEN HELEANNA CAUGHT FIRE

Crowded Ferry Boats Sail Aegean

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM

PIRAEUS, Greece (CP) — Under the 90-degree summer sun heavy weekend crowds flock to the waterfront here at Piraeus, the port of Athens, to board the colorful ferry boats to picturesque islands with romantic names like Mikonos, Sirox, Naxos, Rhodes and Santorini.

For some—young British transients with packs on their backs, wealthy Athens families off for a holiday away from the busy city life, or Greek-American couples on their way home for a visit to their place of birth—there is a carefree, holiday atmosphere.

For others—old men carrying furniture on their backs, women dressed in the traditional black widow's weeds, or harried parents with families of six or seven—it's a return home after a visit to the mainland to obtain a few essentials necessary for the winter months when island transportation is less reliable or less frequent.

The giant doors at the stern of the ferry open and disgorge passengers, automobiles in all states of repair, trucks, motorcycles and buses.

Then the dockside gates open and the new crowd presses its way into the ship.

On board ship not an inch of deck space is clear as hippies, spoken of with some distaste by the natives of Greece as "the hairs", spread out their sleeping bags beside the rail at the stern of the ship and large families distribute their luggage about companionways, stairways and tourist-class lounge areas.

Soon lineups at canteens grow long.

The deck fares for an eight-hour voyage are relatively cheap, about 150 drachmas ($5) but few can afford the luxurious first-class facilities which are about double in price. First-class space is often almost empty in contrast to the crowded deck areas.

TOWNS COME ALIVE

As the ferry cuts through the Aegean the crowd begins to settle and small barren islands come into view every few minutes.

Conversations begin in five or six different languages and tourists tell of the advantages or disadvantages of this or that island.

After several hours, a magnificent island of volcanic rock towering high above the sea appears.

A covey of small brightly-painted island boats comes out from shore to take the disembarking passengers and bring on new ones.

Finally the small boats are loaded with cheering passengers and baggage and head to the shore and the sleepy Aegean towns that will soon come alive until dawn.

The crowded conditions can have an ominous side too.

ARREST CAPTAIN

It was on a voyage not unlike this one that the ferry Heleanna, on its twice-weekly run from Patras, Greece, to Ancona, Italy, was abandoned to a raging fire believed started in the kitchen.

At least 26 persons died in the fire Aug. 29 which occurred when the vessel was about 12 miles from Brindisi.

Some survivors from the ferry accused her owners of failing to provide proper safety facilities and her crew of fleeing the ship in panic, ignoring the cries of women and children.

Passengers claimed there were only 10 lifeboats for the vessel. Four were burned and one was smashed while being launched.

Italian police have since arrested Captain Demetrios Antipas and charged him with homicide.

Police said although the fire occurred in international waters the body of at least one victim was found in Italian territorial waters.

The charges against Antipas resulted from the accusations made to police by many of the 1,900 passengers who survived. A number said they saw the 43-year-old captain and his wife jump aboard one of the lifeboats to leave the 11,400-ton ferry.

Denying the accusations, Antipas said he was one of the last to leave the ship.

Canada Makes Loan

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Canada has given Indonesia a long-term loan of $4 million to purchase Canadian goods. The aid is repayable within 50 years including 10 years without interest. An agreement on the aid was signed here Monday by Foreign Minister Adam Malik and Canadian Ambassador W. T. Delworth.

Mayor Challenges Reid Opponents

Put Up Money For Land

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock today challenged surrounding area opponents of the Reid development to put their money down to help the city buy the Inner Harbor waterfront property.

Haddock said in an interview he would like to see a referendum in each outlying municipality voting funds for preservation of the city's waterfront.

Calling a rising tide of concern over the fate of the Reid proposal a "big hoop-di-do," Haddock said in one meeting held last winter on the waterfront controversy, he counted only six Victorians out of 150 people present.

REFERENDUM?

"I would like to see a referendum" in surrounding municipalities, he said. "If they are willing to do that, I'm prepared to put it up to our council."

Last December Victoria ratepayers were asked on election ballots to say if they were prepared to buy the Reid property and some adjacent land, for an estimated price of $2 million.

The proposal was turned down by 58 per cent of the voters. A two-thirds majority was required for approval.

Meanwhile, at least two aldermen have said they hope to see a strong turn-out of citizens at city council meetings to give council an indication of public feeling.

Ald. Peter Pollen and Tom Christie have said if enough people oppose the Reid development, they are prepared to vote against final approval.

VOTED IN FAVOR

The two aldermen voted in favor of the modified version of the Reid complex. Pollen at the time said he would do so if council would agree to prohibit any further highrise construction on the waterfront.

Subsidy Debate Resumes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A mildly-critical Opposition today resumed debate on the government subsidy program to help Canadian exporters against the new U.S. import surtax.

The bill would allocate $80 million for subsidies to Canadian export industries harmed by the 10-per-cent U.S. surtax and $300,000 for a seven-man board to administer the program. Both sums would cover the program for the remainder of the fiscal year ending next March 31.

Manufacturing or processing plants which have exported at least one-fifth of their production to U.S. markets would qualify for subsidies if the U.S. surtax were jeopardizing production and employment.

Eligible plants could receive up to two-thirds of the surtax that would be applicable on their exports to the United States.

WOULD OFFSET LOSSES

That would largely offset the impact of the import surcharge announced Aug. 15 by President Nixon as part of a series of measures designed to reduce U.S. reliance on imports and shore up the domestic economy.

As such, it constitutes a defensive response to U.S. trade restrictions. Government ministers tried in vain earlier to win exemption for Canada from the import surtaxes.

Other, unspecified measures might follow, government ministers told the Commons.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson said Canada may be forced to reconsider its close industrial and trade relations with the United States. In the face of opposition heckling, he declined to elaborate.

IRA BREAKS TRUCE WITH BOMB BLASTS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A series of explosions ripped through Belfast today. The official wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army blamed the blast on its provisional wing and said the militants had broken their own bombing truce.

The new violence came one day after Irish Premier Jack Lynch and British Prime Minister Edward Heath ended two days of talks in disagreement over means of settling the turmoil that has brought death to 100 persons in Northern Ireland in two years.

The explosions damaged a tire factory, a club of the British Legion for military service veterans and a supermarket less than 24 hours before the IRA provisional wing's declared 72-hour halt in Northern Ireland operations was to end. In addition a British sentry was shot and wounded in Newry.

Huge Forest Blaze Nears Hay River

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP) — A rapidly-expanding forest fire still was out of control today about 8½ miles from this northern centre despite low winds and cool temperatures overnight.

Hay River is the second community in two weeks to be threatened by fires which have plagued the Noerthwest Territories this summer.

Winds of 20 miles an hour had been forecast for today but forestry officials said new estimates indicated they would only reach 10 to 15.

The winds, however, still were blowing in the general direction of this town of 3,500 persons, a principal supply and transportation route into the Canadian Arctic.

Youth's Drive to School Ends in Fatal Smash-Up

A 16-year-old high school student was killed on his way to school this morning when his small imported car was flattened in a head-on collision with a loaded gravel truck on the Pat Bay Highway.

David Richard Hajnal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Danny P. Hajnal, John Road, Sidney, was alone in his father's Datsun when it went out of control on a long turn eight miles from Victoria. The car slammed broadside into a loaded 25-ton tandem truck carrying gravel for highway construction.

Driver of the truck, which was headed north, was John Humphries, 24, of 4132 Wilkinson Rd. He was not injured.

SLICK ROAD

The accident occurred in drizzling rain on slick pavement. The small car was crushed under the heavy truck, and wreckage was strewn 100 feet along the east side of the highway.

The victim's father said David was on his way to the first full day of school in Grade 12 at Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School when the accident occurred at 8:20 a.m.

David had two sisters, Dona, 18, and Benita, 9, and a brother, Andra, 10.

The boy's father said he had discussed at breakfast whether he or his son should drive the small car to the city for repair to the starter.

Hajnal said David was keenly interested in sports, particularly soccer and riding.

Two pairs of soccer shoes were among the wreckage scattered along the side of the highway.

U.S., Soviet Navies Confer in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States and Soviet navy personnel will meet in Moscow Oct. 12 to seek ways of avoiding collisions and other sea accidents between the military vessels of the two countries, the state department announced today.

Press officer Charles Bray said it is the first time since the Second World War that the two superpowers have undertaken talks to reduce friction resulting from the proximity of their military forces abroad.

"Over the years we have registered more than 100 reported incidents at sea and know that other reported dangerous situations have arisen," the spokesman said.

The two delegations also will include in their talks airplane overflights, sometimes referred to as "buzzing," in working toward safer operational standards and procedures, he said.

Heading the U.S. delegation will be John W. Warner, undersecretary of the navy. Leading the Soviet delegation will be Vladimir A. Kasatonov, first deputy commander in chief of Soviet naval forces.

PROPOSED BY U.S.

The state department spokesman said the United States first proposed the talks in April, 1968.

He declined to give any specifics on what the U.S. delegation would propose, but said the United States will not agree to anything which would change the international "rules of the road" at sea, nor would it do anything to restrict freedom of the high seas for U.S. naval forces.

Fishing boat incidents are not an item for the discussions, he added.

Warner's mission to Moscow is believed the first in which a high-ranking U.S. defence department official has travelled to the Soviet Union for significant discussion with Soviet authorities.

Cold Water Tossed On Welfare Job Plan

Industry and labor leaders were pessimistic today about Premier Bennett's plan to find jobs for those on welfare.

The premier Tuesday announced the provincial government would pay half salary of welfare recipients who find jobs starting Nov. 1.

F. G. Peskett, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said subsidies are not sufficient incentives for industry to create new jobs.

"Jobs are created if the demand in the market place requires increased production. You can't make a job that way if it isn't required in the first place."

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said labor will expect far more than the plan offers.

Ryan called on the government to use its fiscal and tax powers as well as government surpluses to "stimulate the economy for real growth."

"It is myopic to focus simply on this problem," Ryan said. "There are far greater problems than merely people on welfare."

ADMINISTER

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will head a cabinet committee of four to administer the plan. Campbell said Tuesday as many as 10,000 persons on welfare might be eligible.

Other committee members are Labor Minister James Chabot, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings, Education Minister Donald Brothers and minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy.

TRAINING PLAN

Premier Bennett said the committee has responsibilities "over and above" the job finding programs in Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's department.

Gaglardi has been trying an on-the job training program for welfare recipients. He said

SATO GOVERNMENT SPLIT OVER POLICY ON PEKING

TOKYO (Reuter) — A split has emerged within the Japanese government over its China policy.

Several influential members of the government and ruling Liberal Democratic party, including candidates to succeed Premier Eisaku Sato, have voiced their opposition to Japanese sponsorship of resolutions at the United Nations designed to keep a seat for Taiwan if China is admitted.

The government already has decided to support such moves, but has made no decision whether to take a leading role by co-sponsoring any resultions.

"It runs counter to a general trend in the world," he said.

The government already has decided to welcome China's admission to the UN after co-sponsoring for many years a resolution which effectively barred Peking.

But cabinet ministers decided to postpone a final decision on how far to maintain its pro-Taiwan stand until the United States administration gave a clear statement of its own intentions.

LIONS RELEASE PAUL BROTHERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran quarterback Paul Brothers today was released by the British Columbia Lions after three seasons with the Canadian Football League club.

Brothers, 26, was the starting quarterback for the Lions this season, and had been the first-string signal caller since 1969.

The Lions' No. 1 backup quarterback has been Don Moorhead, but coach Eagle Keys did not disclose who will start at quarterback in the Lions next game Sunday against Calgary Stampeders.

Other quarterbacks on the Lions roster are Tom Wilkinson, Rusty Clark and Mike Cavan.

Make Elk-Beaver Lake Area 'Play Park', Saanich Urged

The Elk Lake-Beaver Lake area of Saanich is a natural as a "play park for the capital region," Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night.

His comment came as the council's parks and outdoor recreation committee was considering proposald for development of municipally operated amusements in the 60-acre area.

A report by parks administrator Bert Richman outlined this six-point plan for the park:

- A possible takeover, under municipal or regional management, of the Wooded Wonderland attraction when the lease on the site expires;
- Provision of parking facilities for about 300 cars;
- A miniature railroad to run from the parking lot entrance around the area on the eastern side of the lakes;
- A zoo featuring both domestic and "non-carnivorous wild animals";
- An archery range;
- Pitch-and-putt course which could be located in the area previously cleared for a golf course;
- A picnic area provided with covered, open air kitchen and power outlets similar to those provided by the B.C. parks branch.

The report said amusements could make the park much more interesting to people of all ages, but in the development care should be taken to preserve the natural attractions by such means as landscaping and use of native materials.

It also pointed out that another factor to consider was the agreement between the municipality and the capital regional board over administration of the park, which expires in five years.

Curtis said it was important to know what the region visualized for the park. He said it was not by any means a wilderness area, and he hoped there would be more intensive use of certain sections.

Ald. William Noel called the proposals "exciting," but both Curtis and Ald. Leslie Passmore expressed doubts about the need for a zoo.

Curtis said while the game farm approach was acceptable, "more and more people are concerned about the confining of wild animals merely for something to do on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon."

The report was referred to council for consideration.

'PLAY PARK' proposal for Beaver Lake (left) and Elk Lake would cover 60 acres of land which is at present wooded (immediate foreground). Saanich recreation committee was told Tuesday that the plan would include a possible takeover of the Wooded Wonderland attraction, a zoo, a miniature railroad, and various other amusement. Mayor Hugh Curtis called the play park idea a natural. (Bill Halkett photo)

SCHOOL'S IN

A Day of Parting For Every Child

Judy was the tom-boy, a climber of trees, outgoing, effervescent, in love with the world and the people in it. We had never seen her so grave, so withdrawn as she appeared that morning. It was somehow as if her spirit had been bruised. It was like caging a wild bird . . .

Jill was the shy one, a silent, unobtrusive observer of life. That morning held no terrors for her. She seemed to have grown three inches overnight, to have acquired an instant poise. She brought home each bit of knowledge as if it was a gold nugget . . .

Jenny, too, was the outdoors girl, affronted by the very idea of spending the best part of a day in a classroom. Almost as a bribe, her mother had promised to buy her a wristwatch on that first day. They were to go into town in the afternoon for the purchase, but when Jenny came home she had an announcement. "I won't need the watch," she said, " 'cause I'm not going back . . ."

Was it curiosity, journalistic research or, as I strongly suspect, just pure masochism?

Whatever it was I felt a compulsion to pull in behind the long line of parked cars at the Colwood Elementary School Tuesday morning to watch that most emotional of all the suburban adventures: the day the kids go back to school. There can be nothing, surely, more timeless than the spectacle of six-year-old children stiff in their new clothes, and, you'd swear, just a little bit drunk, beginning that crucial chapter in their lives. Now, purely as a spectator, but feeling a remarkable empathy with child and parent alike, I tried to analyze what was going on in their minds.

Part of it, of course, is that tug of feeling that we associate with the agony of parting. It is all very well to say that they'll be home this afternoon, but the day that school begins is always an immutable point of departure, a fork in the road. They will be home in the afternoon, sure, but the separation has been made.

You watch them walk away from the car not turning back for the wave of farewell that you usually get, and they are swallowed in the seething crush of other people's children. Suddenly the summer has paled to autumn and time registers consciously, as they used to suggest it in old movies by the pages of calendars fluttering and blowing away.

A man, a young neighbor, enduring for the first time an experience that I had felt in three autumns of time past, watched a small girl moving out of his protective shadow and then, seeing me watching, leaned from his car window and shouted, "Now maybe we'll have some peace in the house." His heart wasn't in it. Between us, unspoken, there was a bond of melancholy, the sweet sorrow of loss.

I suppose, too, that we react because of a strong sense of identity, vividly remembering the inner turmoil, the first real call for courage, that the day brings to every child.

I could taste it yesterday morning. All the old dread and expectation, the feeling of being in the grip of a current, swift beyond your control, that would sweep you to all manner of terrifying or delightful places. In a changing world it seems a changeless experience, the very first confrontation with the unknown.

If ordinary lives may be divided, as history is divided, into eras, it is the beginnings that are the most memorable.

★ ★ ★

Test your memory. Consider those examples of total recall in autobiographies. Most often they record moments of anticipation, of the fresh start, the cross-roads that are arrived at — the first job, the marriage day, the move to a new city — that cause us to pause and think, with equal parts of foreboding and resolve, of what the future holds.

That, I suppose, is the drama of the start of a school year, not only for those who are beginning, but for those of us who remember it as the overture to a new time in our lives.

The props that go with it play their part and they, too, are changeless. The new scribblers as unsullied as the Himalayan snows. The texts with their crisp, clean edges and the smell of newness. The unsharpened pencils. The small white jar of paste and the brush, those shining tools of education that are perhaps the most exciting of all the hardware we'll ever use in our lives. Put a new scribbler to your nose and you'll catch the fragrance of that day in your own life.

For the father or for the mother it is a tremulous experience, not merely because of memory, but because of the seeming vulnerability of their children. You learn, of course. They are quick to adjust. They are — God knows, the summer proves it — all but indestructible. Still, until the very day they leave forever (and even after that) we cling to the idea that we must stand between them and the challenges they must face.

If we magnify the challenges, if we diminish their capabilities, it is only the natural thing to do, seeing in them our own image.

SPECTACULAR BLAZE on the View Royal farm of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond Hourigan at 23 Helmcken this morning resulted in the total loss of barn, 20 tons of hay, seven saddles and other gear. Deputy Fire Chief Frank Bell said cause of the fire has yet to be determined and estimate of loss could be between $5,000 and $6,000. (Alex Wotherspoon photo.)

Loan Gets Foster Home Plan Out of the 'Theory Stage'

A federal agency loan of $17,391 will help to build a new foster home in Victoria.

The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation loan will give the Victoria Churches' Group Homes Association more than half the funds required to acquire and renovate a home designated primarily for Indian children.

"The church group was formed last February from all mainstream Victoria churches," said Canon Hilary Butler, an Anglican who serves as group director. "This is our first project and it appears now we have enough funds in hand to get out of the theory stage."

Canon Butler, program director for the diocese of British Columbia, said he prefers not to give the address of the home for fear that publicity might lead to social problems for the children involved.

Accommodation will be provided for six children, with church officials hoping the home will be ready in about eight weeks. Minor alterations have to be made and a married couple has yet to be found to act as foster parents.

Probe Sought On Dry Wells

Central Saanich council Tuesday requested an immediate investigation into why a number of wells have dried up.

The municipality has asked the investigation be conducted by the provincial department of lands, forests and water resources.

Some of the residents have laid the blame on a well drilled nearby by commercial bulb farmer Geoff Vantreight. He was unavailable for comment.

On Aug. 31 seven residents, headed by W. H. Hopper, 8231 East Saanich and E. A. Lyon, 8176 East Saanich, wrote to the provincial department urging a survey.

In a copy of the letter read at council, Hopper said his well ran dry July 16, two weeks after cement was poured at Vantreight's 570-foot well. The new well pumps water at the rate of 200 gallons per minute, says Hopper.

Since Hopper's problem two other wells have dried up and others in the area are unusually low.

In the letter the residents said they are concerned about their future supply of water, but there has been no reaction from the provincial department.

Ald. Ted Clayards said the department should be castigaged for lack of action, adding the government should "at least put a stop to the pumping."

Mayor A. M. Galbraith agreed the matter is of major concern and said every effort must be made to come up with the technical answers.

Hopper told council he did not want to condemn Vantreight, indicating his well might not be the source of the problem.

"But we should seek provincial help to find out," he said.

CENTRAL SAANICH EXPECTATIONS:

Similar Tax Relief as Victoria?

Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith hopes his municipality will obtain relief from property tax increases for senior citizens on fixed incomes, as Victoria was promised.

He is optimistic the provincial government will grant him the same relief as it promised to Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Under Haddock's scheme taxpayers 65 years and more, living in single family dwellings, would be able to defer paying increases in taxes above the 1970 levy until their property is sold or their estate closed after death.

MOST INTERESTED

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has said he will seek an amendment to the Municipalities Enabling and Validating Act so Victoria can proceed with the scheme.

Galbraith said in an interview today his council has been working on similar lines, and has made two submissions to the minister.

"I have discussed the matter with Mr. Campbell and he said he is most interested in the approach we are using and will try to co-operate with us in any way he can."

Galbraith said although he hadn't studied Haddock's plan in detail, the Victoria proposals were different in some ways from those submitted by Central Saanich.

Instead of making the scheme open to anyone 65 and older, he said, the municipality was proposing it apply to persons who qualify for full government subsidies on their B.C. Medical Plan premiums.

DEFER PAYMENTS

"We feel anyone at this level should be able to defer their tax increase payments," he said.

Another difference was that, unlike the 8 per cent interest proposed by Haddock, the municipality was thinking in terms of only "nominal" interest.

Galbraith said: "It would be at prime lending rate — in other words the lowest rate we could possibly set."

He estimated that only about 20 persons in Central Saanich would really need the tax relief plan, and that hence the general tax structure would not be affected.

PLASTIC GRASS may be tough and hard wearing but, unlike the real thing, it doesn't always stay the same size. The 5,000 square feet of artificial turf laid on three traffic islands at Carey and Douglas by the provincial highways department is starting to shrink and curl at the edges. The instant turf has been termed "hideous" by local environmental groups. Service station attendant Barry Belscher demonstrates.

No 'Action' For Curtis--Yet

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis today squashed rumors that he has joined Action Canada, Paul Hellyer's new political pressure movement.

However, Curtis said in an interview he is "carrying an application form" for membership in the movement, adding: "But I haven't decided yet whether I shall do anything about it."

He said he was interested in the organization's aims after attending Action Canada's first meeting in Victoria last month.

"If I do join it will be as a private individual," he said.

Asked whether such a move might be made with a view to standing as a possible candidate for the movement in future federal elections, Curtis said: "I am keeping my options open but I have no intention of offering myself as a candidate for the next federal election."

The Saanich mayor was among 400 who packed the Empress Hotel last month to hear Hellyer explain that Action Canada's aim was to "get Canada back on the rails again" through a three-point program of lower taxes, lower interest rates and mandatory wage and price guidelines.

Victoria Ald. Robert Baird was reported still in critical condition in Seattle's Harborview Hospital this morning.

Baird, 65, suffered a heart attack during a game of lawn bowling Friday.

Doctors said he was conscious and "holding his own."

Haddock Back But Pacing Self

Mayor Courtney Haddock made his first trip to city hall Tuesday since his July 13 heart attack.

He said, however, his return to full duties will be gradual.

"The big job right now is to pace myself," Haddock said in an interview.

He said he has not received from his doctor results of cardiac tests taken Tuesday which may show he is healthy enough to return to duties at city hall. He was unable to say if he will attend Thursday's council meeting.

Ald. Percy Frampton is acting mayor for the month of September and if Haddock is still at home Thursday, Frampton will chair council's meeting.

WHEN AN AUGUST BUSH fire was threatening the Indian community of Rae, Chief Alexis Arrowmaker made his decision and gave his orders. The old people would launch the canoes and hold them inshore, ready for evacuation. The able-bodied would fight to save their town.

Showers and a veering wind averted the emergency. When we put in at Rae, 70 miles west of Yellowknife at the end of a sideroad, the canoes rested bottom up on the banks of their narrow inlet.

Houses looked out to Great Slave Lake from the shield-rock slopes above. Behind some of them rose tepees, their sides sheathed in canvas or boughs. The teepees aren't to live in. They provide storage space for gear, also for frozen fish and wild meat in winter. We saw the toboggan-like dog sleds of the sub-Arctic, and the morose dogs of mixed breed that will haul them tirelessly when the lakes freeze and the snow descends on the bush.

The dogs were no longer free to roam as once they'd been. Each was tethered to a stake, and every team had its square corral of new-peeled poles.

Arrowmaker decreed the dog roundup when he became Rae's first non-hereditary chief early this summer. He was obeyed with a minimum of backchat by the Indians who elected him.

A tough-minded and powerful leader, he is determined that his people shall function effectively in both white world and red. When he speaks to the territorial council, which he does with blunt forcefulness, it is in Dogrib through an interpreter.

A white man seeks government approval for a liquor outlet in Rae. No, says Chief Arrowmaker, his people don't want it. He is listened to attentively and with respect.

In the blending of old and new that goes on in the north, Rae has become Rae-Edzo. Rae is the old town: Edzo, a few miles distant, is the site of a new school financed by federal grant. It is staffed by Indian and white teachers. The boys and girls to whom it opens its doors this fall will be instructed in the skills of both worlds.

They will study their own history as well as the white man's. A knowledge of mathematics will not out-rate the ability to tan a hide or set a fish-net.

I have lingered on Rae-Edzo because it seems to me as an interested southerner that red power and white may be working in concert there toward useful ends.

But the time for lingering was past. Our holiday down north was well along. We had better be heading south for home and a garden in which the blackberries would be ripe, and the tomatoes grown large on their vines.

Fall had already kindled the little birch trees around Yellowknife to red and gold when we set out along a Mackenzie Highway that now had landmarks for us.

We knew the look of its clean campsites, each with a screened shelter housing tables and an enormous stove. Those stoves, we'd been told, could be life savers for stranded travellers on the winter road when temperatures dropped far below zero.

There were waterfalls on strong rivers that we'd like to glimpse again. Perhaps in the Sixtieth Parallel border station with its flags and pelts and coffee free for the pouring, we could pick up a white-on-blue Northwest Territories polar bear sticker for our car . . .

We broke our run to the border at Fort Providence that evening. The town follows the north bank of the Mackenzie River by a road that passes from the smartly new of motel, cocktail lounge and school to the old of the Catholic church and pioneer nursing station on its outskirts.

Beyond are grasslands. The broad Mackenzie flows solemly below the cutbanks toward its distant Arctic delta. Back in the town, the sled dogs of the north were howling.

Next morning at Dory Point, the ferryboat Johnny Berens snubbed its nose against the bank and held there with diesels shoving. We crossed the big river and loafed our way, stage by stage, south to Victoria.

It was a good trip.

If it cost us a tire and a tie-rod, it gave us much to consider and remember.

I hope that some year we will see the harsh and splendid land above the provinces again.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MANTRAP. 6:30 p.m., Channel 8. Dick Clark (Remember him, way back in the middle 1950s, when rock 'n' roll was it and so was Dick?) faces Abby Dalton, Suzanne Somers and writer June Callwood. Topics include drugs and drug use (Dick disapproves . . . in the good old days it was a jug of rye behind the school at the Saturday night dance) and the intrusion of drug symbolism into modern music lyrics.

★ ★ ★

IF YOU TURN ON. 8 p.m., Channel 7. A penetrating look at the drug problem, produced by KNXT in Los Angeles and already honored with an Emmy award. Jerry Dunphy is the reporter discussing problems with well-known TV personalities Carol Burnett, Greg Morris and Arte Johnson, and medical authorities and young people who talk about their experiences with drugs. There are interesting revelations in comparisons of opinions between medical authorities, the public and users.

★ ★ ★

ROOM 222. 8 p.m., Channel 4 (rerun). "Mr. Bomberg." An upheaval is threatened when a long-time teacher mistreats students in his civics class and says some disparaging things to them. The incident spills out of the class and affects the entire school.

★ ★ ★

QUARTERLY REPORT. 9 p.m., Channel 5. A current events program that will be offered four times a year, the premiere segment will originate from the National Archives in Washington, D.C., with John Chancellor as anchor man. Tonight's probing report will deal with the 18-year-old vote and speculation on its effects, capital punishment, and President Nixon's forthcoming visit to Red China. The program will have the modern look, too, with pop artist Peter Max doing short pieces on good news, and David Levene, celebrated New York Review caricaturist, offering his views in drawings.

★ ★ ★

NIGHT GALLERY. 10 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). "The Last Laurel" and "They're Tearing Down Tim Riley's Bar." The two Rod Serling dramas are taut and bizarre. The Last Laurel stars Jack Cassidy as an embittered husband who uses the power of levitation to avenge his wife's infidelities. William Windon stars in They're Tearing Down Tim Riley's Bar, playing a lonely widower who commiserates over a world falling apart, just like Tim Riley's bar, an old hangout which is about to be torn down.

★ ★ ★

NFL ACTION: SUPER BOWL V. 10:30 p.m., Channel 4. This winds up the season for the show. Appropriately enough, it recaptures last January's exciting Super Bowl championship game between the Baltimore Colts and Dallas Cowboys. Fans will get still another close look at the decisive touchdown pass play when Johnny Unitas's forward pass was handled like a hot potato as it flipped into John Mackey's hand after bouncing off the fingers of two other players. Everything will build up to rookie Jim O'Brien's dramatic field goal with five seconds left that gave the Colts the championship.

REID OPPONENTS CHALLENGED

Put Up Your Money—Mayor

Subsidy Debate Resumes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A mildly-critical Opposition today resumed debate on the government subsidy program to help Canadian exporters against the new U.S. import surtax.

The bill would allocate $80 million for subsidies to Canadian export industries harmed by the 10-per-cent U.S. surtax and $300,000 for a seven-man board to administer the program. Both sums would cover the program for the remainder of the fiscal year ending next March 31.

Manufacturing or processing plants which have exported at least one-fifth of their production to U.S. markets would qualify for subsidies if the U.S. surtax were jeopardizing production and employment.

Eligible plants could receive up to two-thirds of the surtax that would be applicable on their exports to the United States.

WOULD OFFSET LOSSES

That would largely offset the impact of the import surcharge announced Aug. 15 by President Nixon as part of a series of measures designed to reduce U.S. reliance on imports and shore up the domestic economy.

As such, it constitutes a defensive response to U.S. trade restrictions. Government ministers tried in vain earlier to win exemption for Canada from the import surtaxes.

Other, unspecified measures might follow, government ministers told the Commons.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson said Canada may be forced to reconsider its close industrial and trade relations with the United States. In the face of opposition heckling, he declined to elaborate.

TROOPS STONED IN LONDONDERRY

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Crowds stoned British troops here today in fierce rioting after the funeral of a 11-year-old Roman Catholic girl killed in a cross-fire.

Throughout Northern Ireland, troops braced for a new terrorist offensive as the outlawed Roman Catholic-based Irish Republican Army issued an ultimatum that internment of suspected terrorists be stopped and the Protestant-dominated Ulster Parliament be dissolved.

In Londonderry, the Roman Catholic crowds in the Bogside quarter had been enagered by charges that the girl, Annette McGavigan, was shot by British marksmen as they battled terrorist gunmen.

CONTROVERSIAL MINISTER RESIGNS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Highways Minister Joe Borowski today tendered his resignation to the Manitoba cabinet. There was no immediate indication whether it was accepted, and the minister was not available to reporters. (See earlier story Page 23).

He promised a statement shortly and Premier Ed Schreyer had a press conference scheduled for later after a day-long cabinet meeting.

The rebellious minister, embroiled in controversy over abortion that virtually brought an order from Premier Schreyer to keep quiet or quit, sent his secretary from his office to the cabinet room with the letter of resignation and made copies available to reporters.

He said he "cannot be a party to, or accept child-destroying legislation in which we are involved."

District Residents Too Vocal

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock today challenged surrounding area opponents of the Reid development to put their money down to help the city buy the Inner Harbor waterfront property.

Haddock said in an interview he would like to see a referendum in each outlying municipality voting funds for preservation of the city's waterfront.

Calling a rising tide of concern over the fate of the Reid proposal a "big hoop-di-do," Haddock said in one meeting held last winter on the waterfront controversy, he counted only six Victorians out of 150 people present.

REFERENDUM?

"I would like to see a referendum" in surrounding municipalities, he said. "If they are willing to do that, I'm prepared to put it up to our council."

Last December Victoria ratepayers were asked on election ballots to say if they were prepared to buy the Reid property and some adjacent land, for an estimated price of $2 million.

The proposal was turned down by 58 per cent of the voters. A two-thirds majority was required for approval.

Meanwhile, at least two aldermen have said they hope to see a strong turn-out of citizens at city council meetings to give council an indication of public feeling.

Ald. Peter Pollen and Tom Christie have said if enough people oppose the Reid development, they are prepared to vote against final approval.

The two aldermen voted in favor of the modified version of the Reid complex. Pollen at the time said he would do so if council would agree to prohibit any further highrise construction on the waterfront.

More Violence

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Renewed violence was reported at strikebound Texpack Ltd. today and a company official warned that the manufacturer of hospital supplies might close its plant. Picketing members of the Canadian Textile and Chemical Workers Union stoned three buses bringing non-union workers from Hamilton.

Youth's Drive to School Ends in Fatal Smash-Up

A 16-year-old high school student was killed on his way to school this morning when his small imported car was flattened in a head-on collision with a loaded gravel truck on the Pat Bay Highway.

David Richard Hajnal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Danny P. Hajnal, John Road, Sidney, was alone in his father's Datsun when it went out of control on a long turn twelve miles from Victoria. The car slammed broadside into a loaded 25-ton tandem truck carrying gravel for highway construction.

Driver of the truck, which was headed north, was John Humphries, 24, of 4132 Wilkinson Rd. He was not injured.

SLICK ROAD

The accident occurred in drizzling rain on slick pavement. The small car was crushed under the heavy truck, and wreckage was strewn 100 feet along the east side of the highway.

The victim's father said David was on his way to the first full day of school in Grade 12 at Mount Douglas Senior Secondary School when the accident occurred at 8:20 a.m.

David had two sisters, Dana, 18, and Benita, 9, and a brother, Andra, 10.

The boy's father said he had discussed at breakfast whether he or his son should drive the small car to the city for repair to the starter.

Hajnal said David was keenly interested in sports, particularly soccer and riding.

Two pairs of soccer shoes were among the wreckage scattered along the side of the highway.

Cold Water Tossed On Welfare Job Plan

Industry and labor leaders were pessimistic today about Premier Bennett's plan to find jobs for those on welfare.

The premier Tuesday announced the provincial government would pay half salary of welfare recipients who find jobs starting Nov. 1.

F. G. Peskett, president of the Employers Council of B.C., said subsidies are not sufficient incentives for industry to create new jobs.

"Jobs are created if the demand in the market place requires increased production. You can't make a job that way if it isn't required in the first place."

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said labor will expect far more than the plan offers.

Ryan called on the government to use its fiscal and tax powers as well as government surpluses to "stimulate the economy for real growth."

ADMINISTER

"It is myopic to focus simply on this problem," Ryan said. "There are far greater problems than merely people on welfare."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will head a cabinet committee of four to administer the plan. Campbell said Tuesday as many as 10,000 persons on welfare might be eligible.

Other committee members are Labor Minister James Chabot, Industrial Development Minister Waldo Skillings, Education Minister Donald Brothers and minister without portfolio Grace McCarthy.

TRAINING PLAN

Premier Bennett said the committee has responsibilities "over and above" the job finding programs in Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's lepartment.

Gaglardi has been trying an on-the-job training program for welfare recipients. He said

SATO GOVERNMENT SPLIT OVER POLICY ON PEKING

TOKYO (Reuter) — A split has emerged within the Japanese government over its China policy.

Several influential members of the government and ruling Liberal Democratic party, including candidates to succeed Premier Eisaku Sato, have voiced their opposition to Japanese sponsorship of resolutions at the United Nations designed to keep a seat for Taiwan if China is admitted.

The government already has decided to support such moves, but has made no decision whether to take a leading role by co-sponsoring any resolutions.

"It runs counter to a general trend in the world," he said.

The government already has decided to welcome China's admission to the UN after co-sponsoring for many years a resolution which effectively barred Peking.

But cabinet ministers decided to postpone a final decision on how far to maintain its pro-Taiwan stand until the United States administration gave a clear statement of its own intentions.

FALLING TREES CAUSE POWER FAILURE

A minor power failure in Ten Mile Point Tuesday night resulted in "some delay" in restoring service, a B.C. Hydro spokesman said today.

The failure was caused when a tree being felled struck a second which broke, some power lines. A fuse blew and half a dozen houses were without electricity.

The spokesman said it took 2½ hours to restore service.

Electrical workers at B.C. Hydro are working to rule without overtime, except for emergencies. They hope to speed up the appointment of an arbitrator to settle a contract renewal dispute.

LIONS RELEASE PAUL BROTHERS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran quarterback Paul Brothers today was released by the British Columbia Lions after three seasons with the Canadian Football League club.

Brothers, 26, was the starting quarterback for the Lions this season, and had been the first-string signal caller since 1969.

The Lions' No. 1 backup quarterback has been Don Moorhead, but coach Eagle Keys did not disclose who will start at quarterback in the Lions next game Sunday against Calgary Stampeders.

Other quarterbacks on the Lions roster are Tom Wilkinson, Rusty Clark and Mike Cavan.

Make Elk-Beaver Lake Area 'Play Park', Saanich Urged

The Elk Lake-Beaver Lake area of Saanich is a natural as a "play park for the capital region," Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night.

His comment came as the council's parks and outdoor recreation committee was considering proposals for development of municipally operated amusements in the 60-acre area.

A report by parks administrator Bert Richman outlined this six-point plan for the park:

- A possible takeover, under municipal or regional management, of the Wooded Wonderland attraction when the lease on the site expires;
- Provision of parking facilities for about 300 cars;
- A miniature railroad to run from the parking lot entrance around the area on the eastern side of the lakes;
- A zoo featuring both domestic and "non-carnivorous wild animals";
- An archery range;
- Pitch-and-putt course which could be located in the area previously cleared for a golf course;
- A picnic area provided with covered, open air kitchen and power outlets similar to those provided by the B.C. parks branch.

The report said amusements could make the park much more interesting to people of all ages, but in the development care should be taken to preserve the natural attractions by such means as landscaping and use of native materials.

It also pointed out that another factor to consider was the agreement between the municipality and the capital regional board over administration of the park, which expires in five years.

Curtis said it was important to know what the region visualized for the park. He said it was not by any means a wilderness area, and he hoped there would be more intensive use of certain sections.

Ald. William Noel called the proposals "exciting," but both Curtis and Ald. Leslie Passmore expressed doubts about the need for a zoo.

Curtis said while the game farm approach was acceptable, "more and more people are concerned about the confining of wild animals merely for something to do on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon."

The report was referred to council for consideration.
